British Cabinet to Study Hitler's Reply Today; Poland Orders Five More Classes to Colors

Warsaw Puts Troops at More Than 2,000,000

Slovakia Warned On Concentration Of German Troops There

By Lloyd Lehrbas,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Warsaw, Aug. 29.—Poles tonight received with enthusiasm the address of Prime Minister Chamberlain again affirming British determination to stand by pledges to Poland.

"Once more we have proof that Britain, like Poland and France, is ready to settle all disputes peacefully, but that all these states are firmly decided to remove the danger of future acquisitions," a foreign office spokesman declared.

Reports had spread that general mobilization was likely, but responsible Polish officials late tonight denied such action was contemplated, for the present, at least.

More Reservists Called

[Placards were posted tonight throughout Poland, however, calling up several more classes of reservists, supplementing an estimated 2,000,000 troops now under arms, the United Press reported.

[The government did not reveal the number of classes called up, but five classes were believed to have been mobilized. The new classes will report to regiments by noon Friday.—Editor's note.]

Official circles took a "very serious view" of the concentration of German troops in Slovakia.

This concentration, it was stated, has greatly increased prevailing tension.

Poland, it was said in official circles, has always had friendly feelings toward Slovakia, but has now warned the Slovak nation "not to permit itself to be deceived" by its own government.

13 Germans Arrested

The official Polish news agency reported tonight that 13 Germans of the German minority and two German citizens have been arrested at Lodz charged with belonging to subversive organizations.

The Germans were arrested following a search of their premises which revealed, the agency said, 34 pounds of dynamite and 8 pounds of nitroglycerin in cans labeled as food.

The agency said the Greek captain of the Greek steamship Johannes Carrs, which arrived at Gdynia today with a load of scrap iron from Philadelphia, reported the vessel had been stopped and searched in the Kiel Canal.

Ship Captain Threatened

The Polish report said "German soldiers and armed Hitlerites" threatened the captain in an attempt to prevent him from taking the cargo to Gdynia. The ship was allowed to proceed after several hours' delay.

There was high indignation over a bomb explosion in Tarnow which took 17 lives with 30 injured very seriously.

The two men arrested were established to be German citizens. Two others were arrested.

A late development was the announced arrest of two German consuls at Lwow, in southeast Poland and the other at Cieszyn (Teschen) in southwest Poland. Both were brought to Warsaw and delivered to the German Embassy.

It was officially stated that this was in retaliation for the "treatment given the Polish consul at Marienwerder in East Prussia."

It was charged here that German police occupied the Polish consul's office there for three days and then removed him to Koenigsberg with his entire staff.

Borders Further Encircled

Poles declared their borders were further encircled by German troops moving eastward through Slovak areas along Poland's southern frontier.

Overland outlets now remaining to Poland are through the Baltic states, Soviet Russia and a narrow passageway into Rumania.

German troops in the last few weeks have spread along the Polish boundaries to the west and poised in East Prussia on the north.

Lothian Arrives Here To Represent Britain

Lord Lothian (right) arrived in Washington late yesterday to assume his duties as British ambassador to the United States. Blasts from horns of taxicabs and other traffic noises at Union Station drowned out his comment to newsreel photographers. Here one of them is asking him to repeat a statement, just one more time, for recordings

England Determined to Resist Aggression As Only Means of Saving International Life, Declares New Ambassador

By Edward T. Folliard

Lord Lothian, a 6-foot Englishman, who perhaps knows America better than any diplomat his country ever sent over, arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon to assume his duties as British Ambassador.

He arrived at a time when Europe was caught in the gravest crisis since the World War, with Great Britain and France determined to halt Nazi Germany's pressure methods of dealing with smaller nations.

Lord Lothian, echoing the sentiment expressed by Prime Minister Chamberlain before Parliament, said that Englishmen were determined to resist any further attempt to "remake the map of Europe by violence."

They realized, he said, that unless they did resist, "international life would become intolerable for everybody."

Meets Test of Patience

For all these solemn words, however, Lord Lothian appeared to be in a serene, even jolly, mood. He was well prepared for the London-like weather that greeted him, carrying not only an umbrella but a raincoat.

Flanked by George T. Summerlin, chief of the protocol division of the State Department, and V. A. L. Mallett, counselor of the British Embassy, the new Ambassador walked from the train shed through the ornate reception room of Union Station and halted before a battery of newsreel and "still" cameras.

Rides in No. 1 Limousine

Here he met a test of patience and passed it with flying colors. For the benefit of the newsreels, he talked into a set of microphones, telling how England was determined to stop map revision by violence. As he was about to turn away, Tony Muto, of Fox Movietone, ran forward.

"Mr. Ambassador," Muto cried out, "an automobile horn spoiled that last take. Will you do it over again, please?"

"I'll be delighted," said Lord Lothian, smiling, "if you're sure

Paul Johnson Appears Victor In Mississippi

Unofficial Returns Put Bilbo's Man Far Out in Front

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 29 (AP).—Paul B. Johnson, running with the political blessing of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, today was elected Governor of Mississippi on the basis of unofficial returns from nearly three quarters of the State's voting precincts.

Johnson held a majority of 14,000 votes over his rival, former Gov. Martin Sennett Conner, with returns tabulated from 1,194 of the State's 1,660 voting precincts.

Bilbo, who advocates a third term for President Roosevelt, announced his support of Johnson. Harrison, an occasional opponent of Roosevelt policies, let it be known he was for Conner.

For Other Officers
By the United Press.

A count of 879 precincts, incomplete, gave the following results in other State races:

For secretary of State—Walker Wood, 45,325; Roy Arnold, 38,824.

For State auditor—James M. Causey, 38,535; Bert Barnett, 36,500.

For highway commission from the northern district—F. L. Linker, 12,419; T. J. Lowry, 12,374.

For public service commission from the southern district—C. M. Morgan, 10,479; Gillis Cato, 9,681.

U. S. Orders More Troops, Planes to Panama Canal

By Barry Sullivan

Military guards yesterday were placed aboard every vessel passing through the Panama Canal as "an extraordinary precaution" to preclude sabotage or espionage, and the War Department announced an increase of the Canal Zone garrison by 7,500 was under way.

Simultaneously, Senator Clark (Democrat), Idaho, declared there is an "amazing lack" of modern military equipment in the fortifications of the canal. "They are using antiaircraft range finders that were made during the World War," said Clark, who has just visited the canal.

"Some of the coast defense guns there were made before the war," he added. "They sent some new guns down recently, but red tape will hold up the delivery of necessary ammunition until October."

Secretary of War Woodring, who also has just returned from Panama, reiterated previous recommendations that "the defenses of the Panama Canal must be strengthened." In his annual report to Congress, Woodring said:

"All locks and dams on that vital waterway must be made bombproof. The possibility of sabotage by crews of ships transiting the canal must be completely eliminated. We must greatly augment our air forces and our antiaircraft artillery installa-

U.S. Searches Nazi, French, British Ships

Arms Hunt to Avert Liability for Raiders; Cutters Seek Reich Mystery Freighter

Four liners stood tied to piers in New York today, halted by orders from President Roosevelt that all foreign vessels be searched to assure they were not armed to become sea-raiders on enemy merchantmen and leave this nation liable for damages.

One was the pride of the German transatlantic passenger fleet, the Bremen; a second was the flagship of the French line, the Normandie, and two were British vessels, ordered not to sail until Collector Durning of the Port of New York, and other Federal authorities were satisfied.

Mystery Passengers Sought

Along with this development, Coast Guard cutters searched the mid-Atlantic Coast for the German freighter Wiegand at the request of Customs officials, who sought to question two mysterious passengers believed taken aboard just before the Wiegand sailed from Philadelphia for Norfolk.

Federal authorities were afraid the Wiegand, ordered to return home like all German boats during the war crisis, had put to sea on the return, instead of heading for Norfolk. Pilot William R. Egan, who took the freighter down the Delaware, told officials two passengers went aboard just after Capt. Johann Germann received a short-wave radio message.

"It seems apparent there was something illegal about it," a customs official said at Philadelphia. "We feel the mysterious passengers were fleeing this country."

Southern Raider Recalled

The searching of all foreign vessels registered in nations that might shortly become belligerents if war should develop, was being undertaken by customs officials under express instructions from the President, who went to the American Civil War for a precedent to explain his course.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out yesterday at his press conference that, in the War Between the States the Confederate privateer Alabama was outfitted by Great Britain and armed at sea. The United States subsequently collected some $15,000,000 in damages from the British for the activities of the Alabama.

Emphasizing that this country had no objection to any vessel's being armed for defensive purposes, the President pointed out there was a great distinction between being so armed and carrying weapons for an offensive action at sea as a privateer.

British Liners Detained

This government, he made clear, will interne any ship of a potential belligerent equipped with guns or gun emplacements for raiding. He explained the search policy was being applied impartially, as the French Line's de Grasse and the German New York had previously been investigated.

Presently held here by the search order, in addition to the Bremen and the Normandie, are the Cunard—White Star Line's Aquitania and the Anchor liner Transylvania, of British registry. Durning notified the masters of each last night:

"Pending search by customs officers satisfactory to me clearance will not be granted until further notice."

Bremen Lifeboats Tested

While customs officers searched the craft, the marine inspection service of the Department of Commerce likewise moved into the picture, in what some saw as an apparent intent to keep the boats at dock here in view of the European threat. All safety equipment was being combed over and the Bremen's lifeboats were made to go overboard for a test as to their seaworthiness.

While Mr. Roosevelt did not specify, it was assumed his instructions applied to all foreign shipping from potential belligerents in all continental and territorial American ports, in the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf, including Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Philippines.

One ranking official of the State Department, asked to define what

Peace or War Up to Fuehrer, Chamberlain Tells Commons

Germany Hints Henderson Carried Far-Reaching Proposal for Peace

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Aug. 29.—Adolf Hitler's answer to the British formula to prevent war over Poland was handed to British Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson in the Reich's chancellery tonight.

The ambassador, who brought the British proposals from London yesterday, remained with Hitler 25 minutes.

It was reported in informed quarters that, in addition to handing over the German note which the Fuehrer and Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop drafted carefully today, Hitler explained Germany's attitude orally at some length.

What the German reply was to British proposals remained a profound official secret but hints from informed quarters and the more optimistic attitude of everyone in the German chancellery and foreign office indicated the way was open for further negotiation.

It is reliably reported that the communication was, from the German point of view, "conciliatory and far-reaching," and that the German view now was that the Reich had everything to gain by continuing the discussions.

Prime Minister Chamberlain earlier in the day had been given Hitler's general and informally stated views in a note which the Fuehrer dispatched to London by plane before the final draft of the Reich's reply had been formulated.

Italian Envoy Called In

[One of the mystery men of the present crisis, a ruddy-faced Englishman named David Boyle, who arrived with Henderson last night from London, returned to London in Henderson's plane, and the Post's special correspondent said it was reported that he took with him a private and personal message from Hitler to Chamberlain — separate from the official answer given tonight to the British ambassador.—Editor's note.]

Immediately after seeing Henderson tonight, Hitler called for the Italian ambassador to Germany, Bernardo Attolico, who remained in the chancellery 15 minutes.

It was presumed that the Fuehrer's axis partner, Premier Mussolini, was being informed of each step of the negotiations.

Von Ribbentrop, Undersecretary of State Friedrich Wilhelm Gaus and other advisers of the Fuehrer were closeted with him from late forenoon into the evening while the reply was being drafted.

Hope Poles Will Agree

Under strict agreement between London and Berlin, officials said, "absolute discretion" would be maintained as to the contents of both the British note of last night and the German reply.

This much, however, was divulged: That the Hitler response would not close the door to further negotiations.

The Poles, however, are not in on these negotiations as far as Berlin is concerned.

The Polish ambassador in Berlin is not in contact with the German government, neither is the German embassy in Warsaw in contact with the Polish government, it was officially stated.

If, therefore, the Poles are agreeable to the plan of crisis solution on which Chamberlain is working, they are not making their position known directly to the German government.

Hitler Called Reasonable

Pessimists among political observers believed, in fact, that the Poles might yet form a stumbling block to the joint efforts of Chamberlain and Hitler.

The official view here tonight was that "it is to be hoped that reason may yet prevail."

By "reason," however, every Nazi commentator means acceptance of the German viewpoint.

That the Hitler reply includes more than the mere questions at issue with Poland was indicated by the emphasis which commentators laid—with every air of approval—upon Chamberlain's reference in Commons today to "a wider agree-

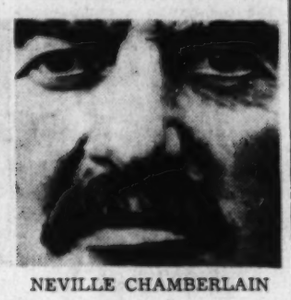
ADOLF HITLER



NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN

BRITAIN'S CABINET was called into special session for today to consider Fuehrer Hitler's latest message, after Prime Minister Chamberlain and foreign office advisers studied the note carefully; Chamberlain yesterday told Commons Britain was fully prepared to carry out her obligations to Poland and the future was up to Hitler.

HITLER'S MESSAGE left the door open to further negotiations, Germans declared, and indicated that from the Nazi viewpoint the message was conciliatory and reasonable.

POLAND BROADENED defense preparations, both civil and military, calling up additional reserves, although officials denied general mobilization was under consideration at present.

FOREIGN LINERS in U. S. ports are being detained and searched for possible armaments to protect the United States, President Roosevelt said, should they turn commerce raiders; officials declined to say whether extensive safety tests were designed further to detain the vessels.

FRANCE ACCEPTED a mediation offer of King Leopold and Queen Wilhelmina, but little confidence was placed in the success of the plan; Premier Daladier said "today we will know" whether it is to be war or peace.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI was believed to have dissuaded Hitler from seizing Danzig last Friday night and was expected to continue efforts for peace; Italy warned citizens to leave Rome and took other defense precautions.—Page 7.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT said failure of Congress to enact neutrality law changes was a contributing factor to the present European crisis and blamed a solid minority of Republicans, allied with a few Democrats, for the absence of action.—Page 2.

PANAMA CANAL authorities posted armed guards on all ships passing through the canal, as Senator Clark declared there is an "amazing lack" of modern defense equipment in the zone.

Crisis Bulletins

Britain Orders Ships From Italy

New York, Aug. 29.—Wireless instructions from the British admiralty in London, intercepted tonight by the short wave radio station of the New York Herald Tribune, ordered British merchant ships in certain European and Asiatic waters to proceed to British ports, while none was allowed to visit Italian ports and those already in Italian harbors were ordered to leave.

Swiss Under Army Rule

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Swiss army tonight took over control of all hospitals, railroads, and telephone and telegraph service as Switzerland decreed "a state of alert."

London Quells Fascists

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—Mounted policemen broke up a parade of Fascist sympathizers in Downing street tonight and closed the street to the public.

Nazis Assure Denmark and Lithuania

Berlin, Aug. 29 (AP).—Germany today assured Denmark and Lithuania that in the event of a European war the Reich would respect their neutrality. Similar assurances have been given a number of other small neighboring states.

Denmark Mans All Mine Layers

Copenhagen, Aug. 29 (UP).—The Danish government tonight ordered the navy to man all mine layers immediately.

Daladier Sees Today Deciding Where France Stands in Crisis

By the Associated Press

Paris (Wednesday), Aug. 30.—Premier Daladier, showing the strain of days of ceaseless French preparations for possible war, said early today "we will know today where we stand."

The premier referred to Adolf Hitler's note dispatched to London last night in reply to the British communication setting forth British-French determination to stand by Poland in her dispute with Germany.

"This Hitler ——," he mused, as he emerged from war ministry conferences. Then, smiling, he added, "what a torrent. His reply to Britain is as voluminous as the note sent to him."

France yesterday accepted an offer from King Leopold III of the Belgians to mediate the European crisis jointly with Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands.

However, little hope was held for success of the mediation offer, which would need Fuehrer Hitler's assent.

The French reply to King Leopold was sent to Brussels last night and when Queen Wilhelmina's offer arrives it too will receive a favorable reply. Belgian-Netherlands offers were said to have been sent also to Britain, Germany, Poland and Italy.

The Polish government last night informed Queen Wilhelmina and

Holds Danger Has Not Receded; Told Britain Is Ready, Parliament Cheers

By Hugh Wagnon,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Wednesday), Aug. 30.—The British Cabinet was called this morning to study a communication from Adolf Hitler which Prime Minister Chamberlain had indicated might turn the "precarious balance" between peace and war.

The Fuehrer's answer to a statement of the British position, described by the prime minister as not moving "a jot" from support of Poland, was received here late last night amid much activity at No. 10 Downing street.

There, at the prime minister's residence, Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax studied the German reply until early this morning.

Then leaving the foreign office about 2:30 a. m. (8:30 p. m., E. S. T. Tuesday), Halifax announced a cabinet meeting had been called for later in the morning. He did not give the hour.

No Comment on Content

There was no immediate comment on Hitler's message.

The prime minister yesterday told the House of Commons the issue of peace or war was still undecided, and that upon Hitler's answer "depends whether further time will be given to the exploration of the situation and for the operation of many forces which are working for peace."

[According to The Post's special correspondent, the prolonged sessions of the British leaders in the small hours led to a widespread view that the German note was of decisive importance, one way or the other.

[Persistent reports were current that when he received the British message at the hands of Sir Nevile Henderson late Monday, the Fuehrer told the envoy in no uncertain terms that, whatever else might be arranged, he must have the Free City of Danzig and the Polish Corridor. One version has it that Hitler also mentioned Polish Upper Silesia in the same connection.

[Well-informed quarters last night indicated that nothing which passed between the Fuehrer and the British ambassador Monday night was of a character to justify increased hopes for a peaceful settlement.—Editor's note.]

"Ready For Eventuality"

Among officials who called at Chamberlain's residence while Lord Halifax and the prime minister scrutinized the reply was Sir Horace Wilson, one of Chamberlain's "brain trusters," who figured in last September's crisis negotiations with Hitler.

Chamberlain and his minister were in conference an hour and 40 minutes.

From shortly before midnight until Halifax left Chamberlain's home about 1 a. m. (7 p. m. E. S. T.) officials were crossing and recrossing the street between the residence and the foreign office carrying papers and documents.

During the period, Sir Robert Vansittart, diplomatic adviser to the government, hurried to the foreign office and remained for a brief time.

At No. 10 also were R. A. Butler, undersecretary of foreign affairs, and Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent undersecretary of state for foreign affairs.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, in determined tones, told a cheering

The overseas grapevine brings the news that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor will be welcomed home to England, before long, with a "Royal Highness" for Wally and a flock of curtseys. This time it's to be, oddly enough, a part of England's war preparedness, another step to bind up the Kingdom's wounds and to mollify the Wally fans on this side.

* * * *

And who would have thought that curtseys for the slim Baltimore girl might help England win her next war?

Anyhow, the Duke is bored stiff in France, and his brother, the King, is now so popular after his American successes that he needn't deem David a rival.

What's more, the Queen has enjoyed such a triumph that she can now afford to be kind to Wally . . . If only the Britons in the streets could be counted on not to cheer too loudly for 'em, they might be home long before Christmas. Autumn in England!

"—if they wouldn't cheer"

Once again a high official here is torn between loyalty to FDR and the natural anxiety to provide for his own family.

This time 't's forceful, dynamic Stephen Early, the only one of the President's secretaries who has been on the job uninterruptedly since FDR moved into the White House, who has been offered a big money job.

The salary is reported around $50,000. His present salary is $10,000, but Early is sensitive to such things as seeming to leave the ship at the eleventh hour.

He has been offered other attractive jobs, but illness and changes in the White House secretariat (Louis Howe, Jimmy, Marvin McIntyre) made it impossible for him to leave. Now Assistant Secretary Hassett and Gen. Watson are on hand to carry on, with added experience.

* * * *

Also, he has declined to consider any job which involved direct contact and negotiation with the Government, so say his intimates.

There's another difficulty: Early's departure from FDR's front office would now be interpreted by many as a tacit announcement that the President will not run for a third term.

So he may choose to work for $10,000 instead of $50,000. Bets are against his departure.

"—scoot up a dark gangplank"

Though Harry Woodring can remain Secretary of War until the end of the Roosevelt regime if he wants to, it is likelier today than it has ever been that he may be out of the War Dept. trenches by Xmas.

The Secretary of War is a natural born diplomat, wants to try his hand at it, and has been discussed in the inner circles for both the London Embassy and our Legation in Canada.

* * * *

Recent developments make the Ottawa post a very important one indeed; one of our half-dozen top diplomatic assignments. Some of the best minds in the Capital, for example, think our treaty ties with Canada surmount our domestic neutrality laws.

They argue that if England goes to war, vast shipments of American munitions may move Europe-ward via Canada.

Moreover, Secretary Woodring is no plutocrat. He cannot afford to spend $70,000 a year from his own pocketbook, as Joe Kennedy does in London and as Bill Bullitt does in Paris. The Canadian post is about one-third as expensive.

* * * *

Also, Mrs. Woodring would think twice before taking her three small blond cherubs to war-menaced London, just as the Kennedys are preparing to send their children home.

Only the importance of the Canadian post, plus the feeling that in Col. Louis Johnson he has an able successor who has learned the ropes, and the conviction that the Army's expansion program is well launched would induce Woodring to think of leaving the Cabinet. But a war crisis involving us might keep him at his present post.

Senate Helped Cause Crisis, Says Roosevelt

Calls Failure to Revise Neutrality Act A Contributing Factor

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt said yesterday that failure of Congress to revise the neutrality act was, in his opinion, a contributing factor in producing the present war crisis.

He told newsmen there was no escape from that fact because notice of it had been taken in every capital of the world.

Mr. Roosevelt's comment came in response to a question on the Roanoke, Va., speech last Saturday by Assistant Secretary of War Johnson.

Johnson said the neutrality act's automatic arms embargo provision, which the President sought to repeal, was "bluntly and obviously" a discrimination in favor of Germany, and therefore an invitation to try a general conflict.

Held Contributing Factor

The President commented that a great many people feel that what he called the decision of a solid Republican minority in the Senate, allied with some Democrats, to postpone neutrality action, was a contributing factor on which attention had been focused throughout the world.

The comments, he said, ranged from those who believed it was a major factor in bringing about the present European situation, and those who considered it a minor factor.

Johnson, in his Roanoke speech last week, likewise asserted "that it was a Republican bloc, aided by a small minority of Democrats," which prevented repeal of the arms embargo. He also asserted that "the attitude and policies of the United States are a definite factor in European affairs."

"To announce in advance that there would be a discrimination in favor of Germany in the matter of arms exports amounted simply to encourage her to gamble on a general war," Johnson told Virginia Young Democrats.

Meanwhile, the President indicated to reporters that he was advised of no substantial shift in the sentiment of isolationist Senators who opposed his neutrality program.

At least one of their number, Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, yesterday reiterated his opposition to repeal of the arms embargo and said he knew of no Senators who had changed their views.

Study British Note

President Roosevelt offered no direct comment or interpretation on recent trends in the European situation, nor did Secretary Hull at an earlier press conference. However, official dispatches were scanned closely throughout the day. Hull smilingly told newsmen he was half an hour behind in keeping up with events.

Both Hull and Roosevelt studied a summary of Britain's last note to Hitler, supplied by the British Embassy, but volunteered no official comment, awaiting the Nazi Fuehrer's reply. State Department officials echoed the view voiced by Prime Minister Chamberlain of England that Hitler holds the key to peace or war.

Among White House callers was Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Thomas, one of 11 committee members who voted against postponing neutrality law revision, predicted Congress would "act impulsively and throw the neutrality law out the window" if war comes.

The Utah Senator, who said he did not discuss European or neutrality questions at the White House, said he believed a special session would be called in the event war broke or if the United States, as suggested by the President in his peace note to Italy, participated in any general peace consultations.

Feels There Will Be No War

In the latter case, as in the former, Thomas said "the President would want his Congress here." Mr. Roosevelt, who has said he will call Congress back if war becomes reasonably certain, did not elaborate on that yesterday. Thomas felt "there will be no general European war."

In Helena, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, likewise voiced doubt that "Hitler would go through with his threats, provided he knows England and France would offer concerted action."

Repeal of the arms embargo, pivotal point in the Administration's revised neutrality program, would permit all belligerents in event of war to purchase arms, munitions and implements of war in this country, undertaking delivery themselves in their own vessels after transfer of title.

Postponed All Action

Administration spokesmen argued this would remove trade discriminations against Britain and France, by giving those two nations, in control of the seas, access to American arms markets. In addition they contended, a Germany well supplied with arms might be less inclined to wage war if Britain and France had a steady source.

The House last session, by a narrow count, voted to limit the embargo to arms and munitions. But the Senate Foreign Relations committee voted 12 to 11 to postpone all action. Should Congress be called back, the question would be put again to the Senate committee, and a one-vote shift could force consideration.

Glancing ruefully over the record of more than $14,000,000,000 of this Government's unpaid World War loans, Treasury officials said another European war probably would further dim prospects of payment. Finland alone has continued regular payments on its $8,233,000.

tions in the Panama Canal Zone. The Panama Canal must be made impregnable."

Production of American armament has not had time to reach top speed from a defense standpoint, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army, said last night in an extemporaneous address before the Virginia convention of the American Legion at Richmond.

He explained that while Congress had appropriated funds for better weapons, the time element between granting of funds and munitions production was important, going on to say the Army is using a rifle "nearly 35 years old."

However, he said, the United States rapidly was moving into production of improved types of weapons and, so far as these preparations were concerned, there was little more that could be done.

Gen. Marshall said he was convinced that in any war combat would revolve about the "man on the ground," who would need all the assistance of mechanized equipment, sea and air power.

Meanwhile, Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, retired, told the national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Boston that United States' security "depends upon defeating the dictators when war starts, and the one way to do that will be to go into the war at first."

In ordering guards aboard ships passing through the canal, Brig. Gen. Clarence S. Ridley, governor of the Canal Zone, declared, "There is no apparent threat to the safety of the canal or of ships using it.

"Because of the impending possibility of war and in view of the international character of the canal, it seems wise to institute some of the precautions appropriate to the neutral status of the United States objectives of the national defense and to eliminate the possibility that anybody in this period of excitement might commit some rash or foolish act which could inflict damage," he said.

The precautions, he added, would continue, "as long as the international situation endures."

It was understood, without official confirmation, that guards at the canal locks also would be reinforced.

The first contingent to strengthen the canal garrison will sail Saturday from Fort McArthur, Calif., when 225 enlisted men and 8 officers of the Sixty-third Coast Artillery will embark aboard the Army transport Hunter Liggett.

On September 13, 8 officers and 226 enlisted men of the Sixty-first Coast Artillery, Antiaircraft, Fort Sheridan, Ill., and 14 officers and 408 enlisted men from the Sixty-second Coast Artillery, Antiaircraft, Fort Totten, N. Y., will board the transport, St. Mihiel, for the Canal Zone.

Increasing the Canal Zone garrison to 24,000 men is one of the program, which is going steadily forward while officials are watching developments in the critical European situation.

The Air Corps in Panama will be strengthened by 31 pursuit planes to be flown to the Canal Zone shortly, War Department officials said. Air Corps personnel in the Zone will be increased by 26 officers and 170 enlisted men.

Admiral Stirling emphasized the United States is "not self-contained," and declared, "the framing of the neutrality laws to keep us out of war—without taking into consideration the terrible result to us of a dictatorial victory—is like 'whistling in the dark,' or 'fiddling while Rome is burning.'"

Co-incidentally, it was learned the War Resources Board, headed by Edward R. Stettinius, jr., 38-year-old board chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, would resume today its swift study of industrial mobilization plans.

Among problems to be worked out:

How to prevent inflation, which multiplies the cost of war and brings depression long afterward. Price-fixing has been suggested, but just how has not been decided. Maybe it will be for only a few key commodities. Maybe, as Baruch suggested, it will include maximum prices for everything, including wages, interest and securities, prices based upon real prices on a day prior to the beginning of war.

How to prevent disastrous competition for labor—and unnecessary migration. Perhaps women and children will be put to work, with existing hour-limiting legislation removed. While men probably will not be drafted for jobs, they may be required to find a necessary job—or join the Army.

Cost of living must be kept down, to prevent rising labor prices and suffering by the civil population.

Tax plans must be worked out to prevent profiteering, while not imposing confiscation of capital or conditions which would tend to keep capital from going to work.

Although American military experts expressed the opinion Britain and France could not send land forces to Poland in case of war, they said they believed the start of a European conflict would see the western democracies "feeling out the other fellow."

The Gallup Poll

Voters Back Cancellation of Treaty With Japan; 81% Favor Embargo of Arms

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 29.—Strong public support of the United States Government's decision to end its trade treaty with Japan is indicated today in a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Not only do the rank and file of American voters approve Secretary Hull's recent notice to the Japanese government, but a large majority of them say that the United States should shut off the flow of war materials going from this country to Japan, as soon as the present treaty expires, next January.

GEORGE GALLUP

Watchful of events in Asia as well as in Europe, ordinary Americans from New England to Puget Sound average more than 4 to 1 in favor of letting Japan feel American disapproval in a concrete way.

The Institute survey used the same methods which have been tested in dozens of State and national election contests to poll a representative cross-section of the United States electorate. Interviewing men and women meticulously chosen in every State to represent America's 45,000,000 voters, the Institute asked:

"At the end of six months, when the treaty expires, should the United States refuse to sell Japan any more war materials?"

SHOULD REFUSE TO SELL WAR MATERIALS	82%
SHOULD NOT REFUSE	18%

Asked in a preliminary question whether they approved or disapproved of the Government's action in canceling the American-Japanese treaty, those with opinions divided in almost the same proportions.

Approve ending treaty	81%
Disapprove	19%

In each case approximately one voter in eight said that he was undecided or had no opinion.

With about five months to go before the cancellation of the treaty becomes effective, Japan, of course, will have an opportunity of reversing the Far Eastern tactics which led to Washington's action. Political observers report that Japan may attempt such a reversal in view of the startling agreement reached by Germany and Soviet Russia which leaves Japan "isolated" in the Far East.

The Institute will repeat its present survey of American public opinion later this fall in order to measure possible trends in U. S. feelings.

In recent months, however, Americans have been increasingly sympathetic to China and increasingly willing to exert various economic pressures on the nation generally regarded as the aggressor, Japan.

Two months ago, in mid-June, the Institute found only 72 per cent of the voters interviewed in favor of an embargo on war materials to Japan, while 40 per cent favored an embargo on war materials to China as well.

There has also been an increase in the number of Americans willing "to stop buying goods made in Japan," according to recent Institute surveys. While 37 persons in a hundred said they would join such a boycott in October, 1937, just after the outbreak of the Chinese-Japanese struggle, 66 persons in every hundred approved a boycott this June.

Today's survey shows that Secretary Hull's action in notifying Japan of the cancellation of the treaty has won the approval of nearly all Americans, regardless of party. Eighty-one per cent of the Democrats with opinions give their approval in the Institute's referendum, while 82 per cent of the Republicans and 79 per cent of the minor party voters approve also.

Guard on Kuhn Asked to Bar Flight to Reich

Bund Fuehrer Scoffs At Dies Inquiry's Fear He May Quit U. S.

By the Associated Press

Expressing fear that Fritz Kuhn, German-American bund leader, might leave the country, the Dies committee asked Federal and local authorities at New York yesterday to guard against his departure.

Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, telephoned the New York Police Department and the Federal collector of the port to take "unusual precautions" to prevent Kuhn or others under subpena from fleeing.

Kuhn has been under subpena since he testified before the committee ten days ago. Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said Kuhn probably would be questioned concerning testimony of Helen Vooros, 19-year-old German-American girl, that she quit the bund because she was disgusted over what she called immoral conditions.

Kuhn Scoffs at Fleeing

In New York, Kuhn, a naturalized citizen, scoffed at the idea that he might flee to Germany.

"Yes, so Mr. Dies is worrying about me," he told reporters, "he thinks I'm running away on the Bremen. Well I wouldn't run away for a thousand Dies. I like it here very much. I wouldn't feel at home on the Bremen or any other ship."

Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, interrupted yesterday's hearing to urge that the precautions be taken regarding Kuhn. Thomas said the bund chieftain had asserted he would "like nothing better" than to obtain a passport which would permit his leaving the United States.

Pelley Called "Racketeer"

The committee heard testimony concerning William Dudley Pelley, Asheville, N. C., publisher and leader of the Silver Shirt Legion of America, which prompted Dies to refer to Pelley as a "racketeer the equal of Al Capone."

Robert B. Barker, committee investigator, had testified that in spite of evidence that the legion assessed $12 yearly dues on a membership of 5,000, he could find no Silver Shirt bank account except one that became inactive a short time after it was opened.

The investigator also said that by-laws of the Silver Shirts showed that all power was vested in Pelley and two other officials, the membership having no voice in the organization's policy.

"He's a dictator," Dies exclaimed.

Auto Club Asks Better Stickers On Approved Cars

The Department of Vehicles and Traffic was asked yesterday by the Keystone Automobile Club to do something about asserted defects in the green stickers issued to motorists who successfully pass automobile inspection.

The club said complaints had been received that the emblems are "peeling off and becoming illegible." George E. Keneipp, manager of the club, wrote Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer that J. Earl Steinhauer, supervisor of inspections, had told him replacement could be made only after a second inspection.

"This, in effect," said Keneipp, 'would penalize thousands of local motorists by compelling them to needlessly sacrifice time and money."

Election Ordered On More Unions

By the Associated Press

The Labor Board yesterday ordered a Wagner act election on or before September 21 to settle a union representation dispute among technical employes of 10 motion picture companies in Los Angeles and Hollywood.

The election will give studio technicians, cameramen, make-up artists, and others in related classifications an opportunity to determine whether they want to be represented by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes (A. F. L.), by the United Studio Technicians Guild (independent), or by neither.

Oil Producers Win Against Price Slash

Texas Wells Reopened As Buyers Restore Old Quotations

Special Dispatch to The Post

Austin, Tex., Aug. 29.—Oil producers who shut down their wells in six Southwestern States in protest against a slash in the price, tonight appeared to have won their victory when leading buyers restored the old quotations.

Immediately upon announcement by the Shell and Humble Oil Cos., largest buyers of crude oil in the area, and several others, that prices had been increased 5 to 32 cents a barrel, the State of Texas ordered its wells opened as of midnight.

Louisiana announced the shutdown order there, which expired at 6 p. m., would not be renewed.

It was anticipated the regulatory bodies in four other States, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and New Mexico, would follow suit. The six States produce approximately 70 per cent of the Nation's supply.

The Lion Oil Refining Co., of Arkansas, a large buyer, announced it was restoring its prices for crude oil purchases in Arkansas fields, effective at 7 a. m., September 1, returning to the schedule in effect prior to the shutdowns.

The Humble company announced it had restored the higher prices because of "changes in conditions."

H. C. Wiess, president of the company, said the company expected orderly production would obtain.

Whatever price you pay per pack, it's important to remember this fact: By burning 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—CAMELS give a smoking plus equal to
5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK

YES, there's not only extra pleasure in Camel's costlier tobaccos, but extra smoking, too, because Camels are long-burning. Recent impartial laboratory tests of 16 of the largest-selling brands confirm the superior burning quality of America's favorite cigarette. Here is a summary of the scientific test findings:

1 CAMELS were found to contain MORE TOBACCO BY WEIGHT than the average for the 15 other of the largest-selling brands.

2 CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE 15 OTHER OF THE LARGEST-SELLING BRANDS! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

3 In the same tests, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER than the average time for all the other brands.

Camel's long-burning, costlier tobaccos also give you cooler, milder smoking... topped off with a superb aroma and delicate taste that have no equal. Get smoking pleasure at its best and more of it per pack in Camels, the quality cigarette every smoker can afford. Penny for penny, Camels are your best cigarette buy!

Pax Romana Of 30 Nations Calls for Peace

Delegates Hear Pleas, Witness Byzantine Mass

"We pledge ourselves at this national shrine to pray for peace, to work for peace and to think in terms of peace."

Against darkening shadows of war in other lands, these words by Edward J. Kirchner, president of Pax Romana, yesterday challenged Catholic student representatives of more than 30 nations, standing at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

More than 200 of the delegates to the eighteenth Congress of Pax Romana, international Catholic student organization, gathered at Arlington Amphitheater for the peace service. Delegates from Germany, Poland, England, France and other countries joined.

Message Sent to Roosevelt

The peace pledge was reaffirmed in messages sent last night from the congress to Pope Pius XII and President Roosevelt.

"We heartily owe your inspiring efforts to promote world peace," the students informed the President. To the pontiff the students sent word of their crusade "for peace amongst the nations, for that peace which is so dear to the heart of your holiness."

Another highlight of the day was an appeal by the Rev. Dr. Frederick H. Chase, of Lynn, Mass., for healing of the schism between Catholic churches of the Eastern and Western worlds. Dr. Chase preached at a Byzantine rite mass witnessed by 1,500 persons in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Mr. Kirchner's message at the Tomb yesterlay was translated into French, Spanish and German.

Pleas For Peace

L'Abbe Joseph Gremaud of Switzerland made an appeal for efforts to promote peace. The group of delegates recited a prayer for peace in Latin. Mary Moreland of Trinity College, Washington, representing the Capitol Student Peace Federation, laid a wreath on the Tomb. A group of Catholic Boy Scouts stood at attention at the Tomb and "Taps" was played.

From there the delegates went to Georgetown University to hear a talk on "Student Life in the United States" by the Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, S. J., dean of the graduate school. He declared:

"Our college students do not take the great part in political movements that their fellows do in other countries. For that, the politicians and the school authorities are profoundly grateful . . . When our students are gathered in large numbers, it is but to urge one of their athletic teams to victory."

Five-Language Mass

In the Byzantine rite mass, following the ancient tradition of the Eastern churches, seven priests of the Byzantine rite chanted the mass of St. John Chrysostom, with the singing during the ceremony in Greek, Arabic, Old Slavonic (Russian) and English.

Led by the Right Rev. Mgr. Bernard Ghosn, of New York City, archimandrite of the Syro-Melkites, the priests who chanted the mass were the Very Rev. Philemon Tarnavsky, of Philadelphia, chancellor of the Ukrainian Catholic diocese of the United States; the Rev. Emil Annanevich, of Philadelphia (Ukrainian); the Rev. Ciro Pinnola, D. D. (Italo-Greek), of New York City; the Rev. Cyril Anid (Melkite), of Paterson, N. J.; the Rev. Desiderius Simkow (Carpatho-Russian), of Paterson, and the Rev. Andrew H. Rogosh, S. T. L. (Russian), of New York City. The Rev. Myron Piekon, of Passaic, acted as deacon.

His excellency, the Most Rev. Constantinte Bohachevsky, S. T. D., bishop of the Ukrainian Catholic diocese of the United States, and his excellency, the Most Rev. Henri-Roger Beaussart, auxiliary bishop of Paris, presided at the mass. The Right Rev. Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, also was present in the sanctuary.

Earlier in the day at a Pax Romana session, the Rev. William Ferree, S. M., of the University of Dayton, pointed out the danger of students falling into routine and complacency in a Catholic atmosphere.

Father Paid 50c To Kill Daughter, Slayer Asserts

Camden, N. J., Aug. 29 (AP).—Peter Shewchuk, 21, former sweetheart of slain Wanda Dworecki, was quoted by a detective today as saying the girl's father—a minister—offered $100 but paid only 50 cents to kill her for insurance.

The disclosure came as Police Judge Gene Mariano held Shewchuk and the Rev. Walter Dworecki without bail on murder charges. The two pleaded guilty, but a New Jersey law prohibits such a plea for first degree murder at a preliminary nearing. Mariano ordered the pleas changed to not guilty.

Detectives said they were investigating the death of Dworecki's wife, Theresa, in July, 1938.

Alcatraz Steward Talks of Bridges

San Francisco, Aug. 29 (AP).—John A. Kesslar, a steward at Alcatraz Federal Prison, testified today he had seen Harry Bridges four times at Pierre's Chateau on Baker street here, previously described in testimony as a communist gathering place during the 1934 strike.

Bridges, C. I. O. maritime labor leader, whom the Government is seeking to deport to Australia as a Communist denied ever having been at the Chateau.

Sylvan Festival To Be Tomorrow

Better Business Bureau Attacks Punch Cards

The Better Business Bureau of Washington yesterday warned the public against lotteries and fake promoters, charm courses and other business evils, urging again its slogan, "Before You Invest—Investigate."

"Although it is a well known fact that most members of the public like to gamble to some extent, the bureau does not believe that commercial lotteries should be allowed to continue to the detriment of legitimate business," the bureau said in its annual report, signed by Claude H. Woodward, director.

In the last year, the report said, commercial lotteries, such as punch cards, have become very popular, and from the interest shown by consumers it is evident they never ask the question, "Who wins?—and never stop to figure out the profit to the promoter.

The bureau also struck at fake charities, operated to the cost of legitimate ones. "Very few members of the public receiving telephone calls soliciting donations realize that probably a professional solicitor employs the telephone campaigners, who operate from a battery of unlisted telephones, dynamiting busy businessmen and other charitably minded persons with requests for donations.

Naturally, it was added, the greater percentage of the moneys received from a questionable solicitation goes into the pockets of these professionals, rather than to charity. Legislation to suppress such activities will be pressed, the bureau indicated.

Answer NoQueries, Reich Consul Told

New York, Aug. 29.—While practically all of the foreign consuls here affected by the European war crisis continued to report today they had received no specific instructions on recall of their nationals for military service, the German consulate admitted that certain orders had been received.

These were, the consulate said, that it was not to answer any questions put by newspapermen, and could not even say yes or no to inquiries.

USHA Ponders Closet Doors For D.C. Homes

Ruling on Details of Ridge Road $1,000,000 Project Likely Today

Technical experts of the United States Housing Authority yesterday studied bids submitted for the District's proposed $1,000,000 Ridge road project and tried to decide whether to leave doors on the clothes closets—or order them off.

John Ihlder, executive head of the Alley Dwelling Authority, prefers the doors and Mrs. Roosevelt recently reacted "adversely" when viewing a model USHA home with curtains hung at the closet openings, pointing out that dust could find its way in.

The USHA, however, is committed to a stringent economy program and pledged to build homes that slum clearance families can afford.

It is understood, also, that the size of rooms asked for the project is occasioning some pondering. The proposed ADA rooms are about 10 per cent larger than the USHA approved minimum.

"The purpose of USHA review of bids is to make sure that the greatest economies possible have been worked out," an official of that agency declared yesterday. A decision on the Ridge road project may be reached today, he said.

The project calls for erection of 300 dwellings on a 30-acre site on Ridge road near its intersection with Anacostia road southeast. It would be for colored families and the first of seven such housing projects undertaken by ADA with financial assistance from USHA.

Clipper Arrives In New Zealand

San Francisco, Aug. 29 (AP).—Pan American Airways announced tonight the California Clipper had completed her 7,437-mile survey flight to New Zealand, arriving at Auckland at 6:58 p. m. (P. S. T.) after a hop of 1,124 miles from Noumea, New Caledonia.

The 41½-ton clipper left here last Tuesday. There were 28 crew members, Pan American observers and government officials aboard.

U. S. to Take 'Firm Hand' In D. C. Strikes

To Act 'Immediately' In 'Crucial' Sand And Plumbing Disputes

The Federal Government will take a "firm hand" today in efforts to settle two strikes which have tied up $54,000,000 worth of construction work in Washington for more than two weeks.

Labor Department Conciliator Howard T. Colvin predicted "startling developments" in the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. dispute when John Steelman, conciliation director, returns to his desk after a day's absence this morning.

Colvin yesterday was closeted for several hours with union and employer representatives in the week-old plumbers' strike and announced no agreement was reached, although the conference was conducted "in an air of friendliness." He said the principals agreed to meet again at a call from the Labor Department and indicated that definite settlement hinged on outcome of the sand and gravel controversy.

The plumbers' issue is a union demand for wage increase from $12 to $13 a day and involves about 300 workers.

It is understood that both Steelman and Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody will demand some sort of settlement in the sand and gravel matter today.

"The situation is crucial," Carmody said, "and we must act immediately to resume operations on two important Government projects which have been affected by the strike."

He referred to the General Federal Office Building and the Social Security Building.

Meanwhile, Steelman will be asked to intervene in the dispute between the Western Union Telegraph Co. and the Commercial Telegraphers Union, Local No. 24, it was announced last night.

Hugh C. McKenny, union spokesman, said the dispute—involving wages and hours—will be placed before Steelman for arbitration today. At an earlier meeting the union's negotiating committee was given the power to call a strike vote.

B. R. Allen, superintendent of the local Western Union office, last night denied union charges that the company had refused to negotiate.

"As proof of that," said Allen, "several conferences have been held attended by officials representing various departments of Western Union and officers representing the C. T. U. in Washington. The last of these conferences was held, August 10 and it was agreed that a further meeting would be held not later than October 15, at which time we would attempt to reach a satisfactory agreement.

"The telegraph company," he added, "has at no time declined to negotiate with the C. T. U. or with any other organization representing a recognized majority of its employes. In fact, the Western Union has already agreed to some of the union's requests, a number of which are now in effect."

Work on the Westmoreland Elementary School on Massachusetts avenue extended has been held up definitely by the strike, Dr. Edwin W. Broome, Montgomery County school superintendent, said yesterday. The school was to have been completed October 1, but will not be ready for this year's school classes because of the strike, he said.

Pupils who were scheduled to attend the new $80,000 school will attend classes in the same schools they have been attending until the building is completed, Dr. Broome said.

1,000,000 Cheer VFW Parade

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP).—In a carnival gaiety which drowned out news boys' shouts, "War threatens Europe!" nearly 1,000,000 persons today cheered 15,000 marching overseas solders of former times and their auxiliaries in the fortieth annual parade of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Rain fell intermittently, but the crowd stayed as the veterans—some grey, most of the others greying—walked briskly along the 4-mile route accompanied by more than 100 bands mixing the theme songs of countless battles in which they fought with swing music.

25 Cranes Ordered For Navy Yard

New electric traveling bridge cranes for Navy yards here and at Boston, Philadelphia, Portsmouth (N. H.), and Mare Island (Calif.), were ordered yesterday by the Navy Department, according to the Associated Press. A $300,690 contract for 25 cranes was awarded to the Harnischfeger Corporation, of Milwaukee, Wis.

Slew Dancer, Beat 2 Women, Youth Admits

DeWITT CLINTON COOK,

Los Angeles, Aug. 29.—The college campus slaying of Anya Sosoyeva, a dancer, as she was on her way last February to appear in a play was believed solved tonight by officers.

U. U. Blalock, deputy district attorney, said a former Waterloo, Iowa, printer, De Witt Clinton Cook, who is 20 and married, has confessed he killed her and that he attacked two other young women, all with a 2-by-4-inch club.

"I believe he is telling the truth," Blalock added.

"I don't know exactly why I did it—about the ravishing, I mean," Blalock quoted Cook. "It was some kind of uncontrollable impulse. Passion, I guess.

"But robbery was the reason I started out in each case. I wanted to get their purses. I thought women would be easier."

Miss Sosoyeva, 24-year-old dancer and dramatic student, was bludgeoned as she walked across the Los Angeles City College campus to the auditorium, where she was to appear in a playlet. She lapsed into unconsciousness after muttering, "A man hit me over the head."

She died a few hours later of a basal skull fracture. Physicians said she had been criminally attacked, but Cook denied today he had attacked her.

He also confessed, Blalock said, that he clubbed Delia Bogard, a movie actress, a month later, and similarly attacked Myrtle Wagner, a nursemaid, in the home of her employer last Thursday night.

Cook told the interrogators that he criminally attacked only the Wagner girl.

Cook's wife, Lorraine, 24, and his mother, Mrs. Ruby Cook, were taken into custody on charges of suspicion of grand theft. Cook insisted they knew nothing of his activities.

Blalock said Cook is normal in actions and appearance, does not smoke, drink or use narcotics. He is slight of build.

Cook was arrested as a prowler last night after a special detail of 100 plainclothes officers was assigned to the vicinity where Miss Wagner was attacked.

In his car parked nearby, Deputy Police Chief Homer Cross said, was a length of scantling similar to that with which the three girls had been clubbed.

In his apartment, Cross stated, were a pair of rubber-soled shoes that fit an imprint found near the scenes of the Sosoyeva and Bogard attacks.

Beneath a kitchen drawer in the Cook apartment the officers found watches, rings and jewels.

Diamonds Fall From Skies, Science Finds

Smithsonian, Carnegie Institutions Find Gems in Meteorites

Better than pennies from heaven is the discovery, made by Washington scientists, that diamonds fall from the sky.

Black diamonds, it was announced yesterday, have been discovered in meteorites, and identified by mineralogists of the geophysical laboratory at the Carnegie Institution here.

Search for the diamonds began after scientists at the Smithsonian Institution discovered highly resistant material while cutting a meteorite specimen from the famous meteor crater in Arizona.

This year they obtained a new specimen, ground out the suspected diamonds and turned them over to the Carnegie Institution. X-ray examination gave final proof that the particles were diamonds, officials said.

In reporting their discovery, scientists recalled futile efforts to drill into the meteor crater in a search for a big diamond mass. The drills went down 1,200 feet, then struck a resistant material through which they would not cut. Underground water halted attempts to sink a shaft to the deposit.

While other experiments indicated a heavy mass in the crater area, officials said the findings had not been accepted as positive evidence that a large diamond mass was there.

Grand Army Shines Guns for (Maybe) Its Last Parade

Pittsburgh, Aug. 29 (AP).—Veterns of the Grand Army of the Republic shined up their muskets and dusted off boots tonight in preparation for a strictly military parade—without women or automobiles.

Declaring they would have no part of modern machines to carry them over the mile-long uphill parade route tomorrow, the 100-odd "boys in blue" insisted they will march behind their State department colors.

The decision to have "just one more" military parade coincided with the apparent keynote of the seventy-third annual encampment that this is the last gathering for many and perhaps the last parade of the Grand Army.

Deadly Bombs Of New Type Await War

Germany, England Well Prepared by Aid of Science

New York, Aug. 29.—New types of bombs, hurled from the air, will be the most conspicuous and terrifying weapons used by both sides if war breaks out in Europe.

The last World War saw the birth of modern bombs in the chemical laboratories of the combatant nations. After a brief respite, their study and development has been going on rapidly in all major European countries and in the United States.

Germany and England, who will be the major opponents if peace is not maintained, have been making intense scientific research and experiments in this field.

That Germany is concentrating some of its best scientific ability to perfection of these weapons, and invention of new ones, is hinted in a recent announcement of the "German state council for research."

Science Asked to Aid

"The German people are preparing," the council said, "in a manner hitherto unprecedented and by an unexampled expenditure of utmost effort, to win its rightful foundation of existence, independent of its environment.

"The Nazi revolution has summoned science to the decisive battle.

"The Nazi state calls on German science to co-operate in the four-year plan. The first task of science will be to give us those materials which nature has denied us."

On the British side, apart from the organized government scientific bodies, such scientists as J. B. S. Haldane have been studying every aspect of the making and using of bombs, and protection against air raids. Dr. Haldane spent much time observing the effect of explosive bombs in Spain.

The two most powerful types of bombs, developed from their initiation during the last war, are the thermit incendiary type and the demolition bombs.

Fire Bombs Destructive

The purpose of the thermit bomb is to set fire to factories, warships and houses. The bomb has a shell casing of magnesium, a metal that burns when ignited. It is filled with fine powder of aluminum and iron oxide. The sudden mixture of alumnium dust with the iron rust produces terrific heat—as much as 5,400 degrees, Fahrenheit.

Fragments of these blazing metals can melt steel and go through heavily shielded structures. Fires of this nature are most difficult to extinguish.

One of the key chemicals in the demolition bombs is T. N. T., trinitrotoluene. Its blasting effect is due to the sudden expansion of gases, when heat of over 5,000 degrees develops instantly. Air or gas expands to more than 10,000 times its volume.

Raids More Deadly

Capt. Frederic E. Glantzberg, of the U. S. Army Air Corps, in the Technology Review, says:

"During the four years of the World War, raids succeeded in dropping on London and its environs some 52 tons of bombs. Today 24 modern bombers could release 96 tons of bombs, not in many months, but in a single attack."

According to Langdon-Davies, author of "Air Raid," one of the most alarming methods of hurling bombs, recently perfected, is "the silent approach." The bombing plane shuts off engines and dives from a great height, so that its coming is not detected by human ears or sound detectors.

CCC Militarization In War Forecast

Prompt military training of the Nation's 300,000 Civilian Conservation Corps youths yesterday was seen as a likely prospect in event war occurs.

Sources close to the CCC expressed belief a bill to militarize the corps might be presented to Congress along with measures to revise neutrality, in event President Roosevelt calls a special session of Congress.

How the Set-up Would Look if the Crisis Were in U. S.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Geography plays an important part in the present European crisis in which many nations in an area smaller than the United States are at odds. Capitals of the Old World are superimposed on a map of the United States. Both maps are the same scale with airline distances noted. Thus it can be seen that American airliners, flying regular schedules across Europe, could span the principal capitals in a single day, but modern war planes are much faster. Residents of Berlin and Warsaw are closer to each other than those of Des Moines and Indianapolis. Note that London and Paris both fall within Colorado and that the Berlin-Rome axis extends from the Iowa-Mississippi border to southeast Texas

Britain to Resist, Says Lord Lothian

this will be the last one."

And so he said his piece into the microphones again and shook hands with Mr. Summerlin again, while attaches from the British Embassy and the Canadian and South African legations joined in the laughter. The Irish Legation, so far as could be seen, was not represented.

Lord Lothian journeyed to the $1,000,000 British Embassy on Massachusetts avenue in a limousine bearing a tag inscribed "DPL-1." That diplomatic tag No. 1 eventually will go to another. The British have had it because Sir Ronald Lindsay, Lord Lothian's predecessor, was dean of the Diplomatic Corps. The dean now is Ambssador Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, of Peru.

Lord Lothian probably will present his credentials at the White House today or tomorrow. When that ceremony has been gone through, he said yesterday, he will be happy to receive representatives of the press.

The new envoy, a 57-year-old bachelor, was a journalist himself when, in 1916, he became secretary to Prime Minister Lloyd George. He was known as Lloyd George's "Col. House," and was credited with having written many sections of the Versailles Treaty.

He received his title in 1930 on the death of a cousin. Besides being the Marquess of Lothian, he is Lord Newbattle, Earl of Lothian, Baron Jedburgh, Earl of Ancrum, Baron Kerr of Nisbet, Baron Long-Newton and Dolphingston, Viscount of Brien, Baron Kerr of Newbattle and Baron Ker.

Lord Lothian is a Christian Scientist and has written much about that faith.

When he arrived yesterday on the Aquitania it was his fifteenth journey to the United States. As secretary of the Rhodes Trust, he has visited 44 of the States and prides himself on knowing something about American public opinion. In a speech last July he advised the United States and Great Britain, as nations with an "undoubted underlying unity" but unsuspected differences, each "to go our own way humbly, exchanging counsel as and when we may" in facing the challenge of the dictatorships.

Lord Lothian once believed that Adolf Hitler was "earnestly" desirous of peace, and he advocated an Anglo-German pact. He even suggested that Germany's colonies be restored to her. Then came Munich and Hitler's seizure, first of the Sudetenland, and then of all of Czecho-Slovakia. From that time on, Lothian has been convinced that the only way to deal with Hitler and Mussolini is through superior power.

When Lord Lothian was asked in New York yesterday about returning Germany's colonies, he merely grinned.

British Cabinet Studies Hitler's Reply

House of Commons yesterday that Great Britain is "ready for any eventuality"—war in defense of Poland if need be, or peaceful negotiation of the German-Polish quarrel if Adolf Hitler agrees.

Britain's determination to fight at the side of Poland in event of aggression stands firm, the 70-year-old prime minister reiterated, and the issue is squarely up to the German Fuehrer.

"We still hope and work for peace, but we will not abate any jot of our resolution to hold fast to the lines which we have laid down for ourselves," he declared.

Frontier tension must be diminished, he said, as "the first prerequisite" for peaceful negotiation of the quarrel arising out of Germany's demand for Danzig, the Polish Corridor and other concessions from Poland.

Chamberlain disclosed but little of the diplomatic exchanges that have been flying back and forth between London and Berlin because of the "extreme delicacy" of the situation in which grave issues "hang precariously in the balance."

Chamberlain's 16-minute address informed the crowded Commons that there had been little change in the situation since the House met last Thursday, despite the flurry of diplomatic maneuvers, and that the danger of war had not "in any way receded."

"Obligations Will Be Carried Out"

The "main points" of the discussions with Hitler, he indicated, were these:

Hitler left "no doubt as to the urgency of settling Polish-German questions" but "was concerned to impress upon His Majesty's government his wish for an Anglo-German understanding of a complete and lasting character."

Britain "would naturally welcome an opportunity of discussing with Germany the several issues" loking toward a "permanent agreement."

"Everything turns upon the manner in which the immediate differences between Germany and Poland can be handled and the nature of the proposals which might be made for any settlement."

"We have made it plain that our obligations to Poland, cast into formal shape by the agreement signed on August 25, will be carried out."

Britain has repeated that German-Polish differences should be capable of solution by peaceful means and "an equitable settlement . . . reached by free negotiation . . . might in turn lead on to wider agreement which would accrue to the lasting benefit of Europe and the world at large."

First, however, "tension created by frontier clashes and reports of incidents on both sides of the border, should be diminished."

Lauding British unity, determination and confidence, Chamberlain said the people's "remarkable calm" during the tense period of waiting for Hitler's decision was due to two things:

"First . . . none of us have any doubt as to where our duty lies.

"Second . . . we are ready for any eventuality."

In proof of this readiness, the prime minister announced the whole British fleet is "now ready at a moment's notice to take up the dispositions (battle stations) which would be necessary in war."

Reviewing in broad outline other measures for "active defense," Chamberlain said air-raid defenses "are in a state of instant readiness."

"Plans for the evacuation of school children and young children, expectant mothers, and blind persons from certain congested areas have been evolved," he said, noting yesterday's rehearsals for evacuation of London's school children.

No Rationing in Britain

Speaking almost apologetically for the "inconvenience to the public" of necessary government requisitioning, he nevertheless added, in a caustic reference to Germany, that "at any rate, we have not had to begin here by issuing rationing cards."

Chamberlain spoke in measured tones, slow, calm and determined, although he showed signs of strain and occasionally his voice faltered.

He was loudly cheered and many ministers rose when he repeated Britain's determination to stand by Poland.

Foreign Secretary Halifax addressed the House of Lords along the same lines, saying "the position remains one of great anxiety and danger, but hope must not be finally abandoned; there is still hope that reason may prevail."

The opposition spokesmen, Arthur Greenwood for Labor and Sir Archibald Sinclair for the Liberals, joined Chamberlain in declaring a united front.

In contrast to Chamberlain's deliberate demeanor, Greenwood banged the bench and demanded immediate evacuation of women and children from London, asserting the government would be responsible for loss of life if an outbreak of hostilities came suddenly.

"Rehearsals are not enough," he shouted.

Greenwood cited President Roosevelt's peace appeal and the "magnificent response" by Poland as contrasted with Hitler's failure to reply, and said:

"On his (Hitler's) shoulders lies the responsibility for the making of war."

"The last word rests with Herr Hitler," said Sinclair. "We cannot go on from one crisis to another."

As the prime minister left Downing street for an audience with King George, the crowd cheered and a man shouted, "God bless him, God bless old Chamberlain!"

Parliament adjourned until next Tuesday, or earlier, if necessary.

Abe Expected To Push War; Cabinet Filled

Moderate Foreign Policy by Japanese Premier Likely

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Aug. 29.—The man who commanded the Japanese forces in central China most of last year, Gen. Shunroku Hata, was named minister of war today as the new premier, Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, filled the key posts of his cabinet.

The new government was expected to pursue a moderate course in international affairs, but to push ahead vigorously with the undeclared war in China.

[The composition of the cabinet has diminished somewhat the hope that was aroused when Gen. Abe was chosen to make a fresh start in coping with the national difficulties, according to The Post's special correspondent. Its members, while not complete nonentities, are not conspicuous personalities in the eyes of the public, and doubt is expressed as to their ability to make the momentous decisions that must be done.

[Typical comments in the press on the new ministry are "flat and lacking in freshness," and "wisdom, but little power." There is a tendency to reserve judgment on the outlook, and the question is being asked as to how long the new cabinet will last.—Editor's note.]

The 64-year-old Gen. Abe, who emerged from retirement, surrounded himself with political veterans for the task of restoring domestic unity while avoiding international pitfalls.

Apparently at the word of the army, Gen. Abe reduced the number of cabinet posts from 15 to 10 through consolidation of minor ministries.

Abe Keeps Foreign Affairs Post

Gen. Abe announced he himself for the present would retain the foreign affairs portfolio in the new government, which succeeds that of Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma. The Hiranuma government, which maintained close ties with the Rome-Berlin axis, resigned as a result of the signing of the Berlin-Moscow nonaggression pact.

The new government is expected to pursue an isolationist policy. In line with this, authoritative circles believed that the ambassadors to Rome and Berlin, Toshio Shiratori and Maj. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, who had advocated outright military alliance with the axis, would be replaced.

The Ambassador to the United States, Kensuke Horinouchi, was expected to remain at his post.

Fleet Chief Leads Navy

Vice Admiral Zengo Yoshida, commander in chief of the combined fleet, was named navy minister. Kazuo Aoki, president of the cabinet planning board, was appointed finance minister.

Other members of the new cabinet are:

Justice, Dr. Chogoro Miyagi.

Overseas affairs, Yasuo Kanemitsu.

Communications and railways (two portfolios), Ryutaro Nagai.

14 Mongol Planes Held Downed

Tokyo (Wednesday), Aug. 30. (AP). Domei (Japanese News Agency) reported today that Japanese army planes had shot down 14 of 30 attacking Mongol planes over the border between Soviet Outer Mongolia and Manchukuo in the vicinity of Lake Bor.

ment which would accrue to the lasting benefit of Europe and the world at large."

One unusually well informed source also called attention to the demands put forward by Hitler to Premier Daladier of France as an example of "building bridges for the Poles."

These demands were: The return of Danzig and the Corridor, and the cessation of "Macedonian conditions" on the German-Polish border.

Hitler, this source said, had been "especially reasonable" in his letter to Daladier so that a resort to arms might not be necessary.

Corridor Plebiscite Urged

Earlier German demands were reported to have included the return of Polish Silesia and reduction of an emasculated Poland to the virtual status of a protectorate.

[Ambassador Henderson conferred with French Ambassador Coulondre this morning, International News Service said, and gave him a description of Hitler's preliminary reactions to the British proposals.

[The first indication that a plebiscite in the Corridor might be acceptable to Hitler, if proposed by the British, appeared in the authoritative Berlin newspaper Daz, which played on its front pages an argument that inhabitants of the Polish Pomorze region were "prevented" from having a plebiscite in 19[illegible].

["This privilege," the newspaper said, "should now be made an actuality."—Editor's Note.]

Mobilization Continues

While negotiations were going on, mobilization measures in Germany continued unabated.

One authorized commentator called attention to Chamberlain's statement that the British fleet was ready to take up war positions at any moment.

"Naturally we, too, are keeping up our readiness to act if need be," he said.

The railroads still were jammed with soldiers.

All restrictive measures regarding food, textiles, gasoline, soap and other objects of daily need were in full force.

The press continued to call attention to the smiling faces of the citizens as they accustomed themselves to warlike measures.

Willing to Negotiate, Says Press

Berlin (Wednesday), Aug. 30 (U.P.).—"London must now choose," the German people were notified today by party and government organs.

Indications of the Fuehrer's apparent willingness to continue diplomatic negotiations came from such responsible organs as the Voelkischer Beobachter, Hitler's own nwespaper, and the National Zeitung of Essen, personal organ of Field Marshal Goering.

British Plan Safety Sectors For Americans

Thousands of Tourists Jam U. S. Embassies in Rush to Escape War

Hundreds of Americans streamed across the Atlantic yesterday en route home, while thousands besieged diplomatic offices in futile quest for immediate passage on anything that would float or fly.

Meantime, evacuation plans were sped all possible, a major step being joint British-American arrangement of four safety sectors to which Americans in England could be taken while awaiting transportation.

Leading the procession home was Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, aboard the Coast Guard cutter George W. Campbell, en route from Bergen to Newfoundland, where a plane will meet him Saturday to rush him to Washington.

However, Postmaster General James A. Farley remained in Ireland, dining last night with President Douglas Hyde. Farley and his two daughters will leave Friday. Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, was in London and friends here were speculating over the whereabouts of Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, unheard from since he went to Europe the day Congress adjourned.

800 Stranded in Scotland

Some 800 Americans were stranded in Scotland, seeking passage via Glasgow. Consular officers reported many were running low on funds with which to live, although all either had return tickets or money for fare.

Upward of 2,000 for whom there was no immediate way to get home were registered with the embassy in Paris. Many of them were collegians, and diplomatic aides reported they were enjoying themselves about Paris in spite of the grimness of the peril of war.

The French liner Champlain put off from Le Havre yesterday for New York with 1,000 passengers, of whom the majority were United States citizens. Freighters touching war-zone ports were loading aboard all possible passengers on emergency cots to expedite evacuation.

Paris Embassy Jammed

The American minister at The Hague, in concert with envoys at London, Paris and Berlin, advised Americans to return home now rather than risk difficulties in event of war.

Embassy officials at Paris reported Americans jammed the corridors. Volunteers helped the regular embassy staff in taking care of applicants for passage.

Hundreds had steamship tickets for the near future but cancellations of many westbound sailings voided them. All sailings of the Hamburg-American Line, the Italian Line, the Brittanic, Scythia and Aurania of the Cunard White Star Line and the Duchess of Bedford of the Canadian Pacific were canceled.

200 Leaving Genoa

Pan-American Airways said westbound flights of transatlantic clippers were booked until mid-September. Long lines of people waited before shipping offices.

The freighter President Monroe was ordered to serve as a passenger ship for evacuation of 200 Americans from Genoa today or tomorrow. The President Monroe, now in the Mediterranean, will sail for New York.

Coincidentally, American marine underwriters canceled all war risk insurance on German and Italian vessels and on shipments to, from, transshipped or calling at Italian or German ports.

In a move to provide vessels for bringing Americans home, the Maritime Commission has agreed to protect the S. S. Manhattan, now at sea, against losses, and may extend the agreement to vessels of the Seantic and American Export lines. The Manhattan had planned to put in at Cobh, Ireland, and not touch at French or English ports. The commission's action provides a form of insurance to replace that canceled or made prohibitive in cost by increases in premiums by underwriters.

Collegians Frolic in Paris

Many American college boys and girls swarmed Paris cafes, dined, danced and apparently enjoyed their enforced stay. The reduction in the number of taxis did not bother them. Whenever they got one they crowded in, eight or ten strong.

U. S. Consul General Leslie A. Davis, at Glasgow, is making every effort to evacuate the 600 "refugees" there, getting some out on small, slow freighters. But, the average freighter cannot carry more than 30 passengers, even when cots and mattresses have been spread in the dining saloon and narrow alleyways. Some went to Norway to try and get passage home, while others have gone to Ireland, Davis said.

Detailed plans for evacuation of Americans through four British "evacuation sectors" were announced at the United States Embassy in London.

Embassy officials also announced the Swedish-American liner Drottningholm would reach Glasgow September 5 to take American passengers to Gottingen and thence to New York. Other agencies also were obtaining ships to transport stranded Americans.

Safety "Sectors" Arranged

The evacuation plans, which have been formulated since the crisis a year ago, provide for moving out of London to four sectors tourists and American residents who wish to return home.

Buses and railroads will be used to get the Americans to the sectors, the locations of which were not disclosed. The embassy said one would be in southern England, another in central England, the third in Scotland, and a fourth in Ireland. They emphasized "no sector is near any military objective, naval or air base or store of petrol."

Americans will be accommodated at these centers until they can be removed by United States ships. At one point, a hotel has been obtained by the embassy; at another, refugees will be lodged in a dance hall and, at a third, a sanitarium will be converted into a hotel.

"We will have to beat the gun in evacuating people from London," one official said. "There won't be any room for them once they start evacuating the school children and others. So we will try and get them out a little before war starts—if it starts."

5,000 Working in London

The embassy believes there are 5,000 Americans working in London. "Most of them can take care of themselves," the official said. "The tourists are our chief concern. They do not know their way around England, whereas the others do."

The embassy has stores of gasoline which will be doled out to American auto owners in emergency cases. Special identification cards will be given Americans, about 4,000 of whom have registered. Negotiations are under way by the embassy for hiring two small cruise liners, the Stella Polaris and the Meteor, both Norwegian, as transports. The Cunard-White Star Line is trying to obtain use of the Angorra, owned by the British India Steam Navigation Co., and the Van Dyck, of the Lamport & Holt Line.

The American Legation at Budapest last night advised Americans to leave Hungary as soon as possible.

Kreisler Seeking Passage

The big American hospital at Nuilly held its staff, drivers, moving men, vans and ambulances on the alert ready to remove the institution to a place of safety somewhere on the northern French coast."

Evacuation of Americans continued. Among movie and stage stars leaving in the next few days are Norma Shearer, Charles Boyer and Grace Moore.

Fritz Kreisler, famous violinist, discovered among crowds at the United States embassy, said the situation reminded him "of those awful days of 1914."

Jo Davidson, the American sculptor, was helping Kreisler and others.

The lad at lower left was intent on getting a good candid shot of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt when she visited the work camp for democracy yesterday at West Park, N. Y. At the camp, 60 youngsters, including 23 recently arrived refugee youths, are studying the principles of democracy. They interrupted the digging of a swimming pool to greet Mrs. R.

Reich Food Crisis Seen if War Comes

By International News Service

Facing a complete lack of official reports from the Reich, this Government's economists are attempting to appraise Germany's food supply and anticipate her likely needs in event of prolonged war.

It was the unofficial estimate of Commerce authorities that Germany, though assumed to have stocked up on vital grains and food needs in her military preparedness, would be caught short in a long war, as she was in the World War.

The Reich thus might conceivably depend upon the United States market for grain and other surpluses, they said, and might purchase them in large quantities if limited embargoes and unobstructed sea traffic permitted.

Soviet Defers Nazi Pact Action; To Reinforce Western Border

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Aug. 29.—Soviet Russia today further deferred ratification of the new nonaggression pact with Germany and at the same time decided to strengthen garrisons on the western frontier.

The Soviet Grand Council, or Parliament, was not expected to ratify the nonaggression pact until Friday at the earliest as a result of delays in going through its agenda.

Meanwhile Tass, official news agency, announced the high command would strengthen the western garrisons because of tension in eastern Europe.

The announcement was made in denying what the agency said were foreign reports that 200,000 or 300,000 Soviet troops had been withdrawn from the western borders and moved eastward to reinforce Soviet frontiers.

The Grand Council decided that the second item of its agenda, changes in the military service law, would not be considered until Thursday, for which day a joint session of the two houses was called.

Ratification of the nonaggression pact is the third item on the agenda. Most observers thought action was being delayed until the European situation had further clarified.

2 Navy Fliers Killed in Crash

Oceanside, Calif., Aug. 29 (INS).—Two United States Navy fliers were killed today when their scouting bomber crashed in the Pacific off Oceanside. The victims:

Ensign G. M. Tiumbower, 24, of Norwalk, N. J., a member of the United States Navy Reserve, and H. B. Valler, 24, radioman, second class, of Springfield, Mass.

The fliers, attached to Scouting Squadron Five at San Diego, were engaged in a routine training flight when their craft hit the waves, burst into flames and broke up.

Wear Smoked Glasses To 'Lady of Tropics!'

Hedy Lamarr's Beauty Blinding in New Film; Holden Here Tomorrow; 'Oz' Opens Friday; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THAT PROLIFIC and pungent playwright, Mr. Ben Hecht, obviously knows his Kipling. The passage that seems to have stuck in his mind with especial tenacity is that familiar business about "For East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet." This, in effect, is the gist of his story of "Lady of the Tropics," in which Robert Taylor and the extravagantly exotic Hedy Lamarr will be seen as costars for the first time on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning Friday.

BELL

In this sultry subject, Mr. Taylor is cast as a playboy tourist who drops off a friend's yacht at Saigon, in French Indo-China, and falls under the spell of one Manon de Vargnes, an unspeakably lovely half-caste, whose social aspirations are effectively thwarted by the fact that while her father was a Frenchman of attainment, long since departed for his native Paris, her mother was a native. Pierre Delaroch, who would have been Boss Pendergast had Saigon been Kansas City, thinks Manon an extremely desirable chattel. So does Bill Carey. When Father Antoine marries Bill and Manon, he explains to Bill that he always will know half of his wife's complex nature, but that the other half ever will remain as inscrutable as the ways of Providence. That is the way it turns out.

One might go into the matter of palatial homes, glittering cafes, third-rate honky-tonks, rubber plantations and the other aromatic ingredients Author Hecht has tossed into his steaming kettle of plot, but an hour after yesterday afternoon's preview screening the one dominant impression that remains is that Hedy Lamarr is a tremendous and devastating lot of woman. There is slight temptation to substitute the word "actress" for "woman," but, after all, anyone who can look as ravishing as Miss Lamarr contrives to do in practically every scene needn't bother greatly about the intricacies of being a Bernhardt or a Duse. Even so, there is considerably more of a role for her here than there was in "Algiers." Mr. Hecht's story is something else again.

Robert Taylor is Robert Taylor, with the accent rather on the sap, as his character has been drawn. That is all right, too. "Lady of the Tropics" evidently was neither written nor produced with any idea of contributing an imperishable work to the shelves of dramatic literature. The suspicion is that it was thought up to afford a vicarious thrill to the emotionally susceptible of both genders. It performs its appointed function with inflammable intensity.

Lest it be thought that "Lady of the Tropics" is devoid of first-grade histrionics, it should be pointed out that Joseph Schildkraut is in the cast in the role of Delaroch, which he plays with dastardly finesse and conspicuous effectiveness. As high as 11 to 10 that the Capitol will be packed, come Friday.

The surprise announcement of the week is the one that says William Holden, who will be seen in the title role of "Golden Boy" on the Earle screen, beginning Friday, will be a Washington visitor tomorrow. The wire reposing on the desk upon my return from the Hedy Lamarring promises later details as to hour of arrival, length of stay, etc., etc. It also hints of a luncheon, somewhere at some time or other, to permit the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the press opportunity to meet the young man who makes such an emphatic screen success of the role played on the stage here in the Group Theater production by Elia Kazan. Mr. Holden, whose career seems to be soaring rapidly toward stardom, need take a back seat to no one in his first performance in a role of importance. He is as good a "Golden Boy" as you would care to see.

Tucked under the Holden announcement was another one from Bess Davis Schreiner, Washington and Baltimore sales manager for the subscription season of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society of Washington, heralding Tallulah Bankhead in Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes" as one of the forthcoming subscription plays at the National Theater. This, however, probably will be some time late in the season, owing to the great success of the star and play on Broadway where it is one of the current hits apparently destined to run for many months to come.

It has already been chronicled here that Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in "The Taming of the Shrew," Paul Vincent Carrol's "The White Steed" and "Outward Bound," the "command performance" play of last January, with Laurette Taylor and Florence Reed, also are included among the Guild's tentative subscription plays.

That is why prospective subscribers are importuned to hustle a bit if they wish to snap up any of the excellent orchestra locations that remain available or the precious few that are still to be had in the balcony.

Never mind about that 12-year-old child's part for the Roadside Theater's impending revival of "The Drunkard." The role has been filled by the engagement of Miss Trice Bulger, whom the management deems ideally suited for the part. The talented Miss Bulger may be remembered by many as the youthful actress who acquitted herself with such high acclaim in the Civic Theater's production of ". . . one third of a nation . . ."

Speaking of the Roadside, there will be more firemen in the audience than on the stage at tonight's performance of "The Still Alarm." Tonight is the night the officers, trustees and local members of the International Association of Fire Fighters, in convention in Washington, will watch the drama of fire-figting in the '80s, now in its second week in the "old red barn" out Bethesda way on the Rockville pike. The list of those who will be in attendance has grown to expanded proportions since its publication here a week or two ago and now includes many dignitaries of the Federal establishment in addition to the visiting veterans of the ladder and the hose.

Beginning tomorrow night with the inauguration of the bill featuring "Dead End" and five selected reels of Walt Disney's color cartoons, first performances will start at the Mount Vernon, open-air, automobile theater, a few miles below Alexandria, Va., on the Richmond highway, at 7:15 o'clock, instead of 7:45. The shortening of the days thus will make possible longer programs than heretofore have been the rule.

The wait is about over. "The Wizard of Oz," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's amazing Technicolor picturization of the original L. Frank Baum "Oz" story, will open on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater this Friday. Fortunately, we already have told you something of the superlative quality of this extraordinary film. Now you can go see for yourself.

Officer-Call-the-Wagon Note

It probably was that other fellow, Ray Bell—no relation—who said: "Oz well that ends well!"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 29.—Bette "Academy Winner" Davis is planning to make a change in her present set-up. We hear there'll soon to be announcement from Warner Brothers. She's tired of doing so many pictures a year—and who can blame her? She's the hardest working actress in Hollywood. Sometime ago, you'll remember, she tried to leave Warners and went to England—suit followed. She recently signed with Manager Myron Selznick. Myron is the chap who broke the contract for Loretta Young at Twentieth Century, and he's still barred from that lot. But he set Loretta up on a new deal of $150,000 for a picture—and suggested that she do only two pictures a year. Bette would like this kind of a deal. And if Loretta can do it why not Bette—who is our finest actress? I'm sure Warners will see the light, because Myron represents practically all the Warner Brothers stars except Muni.

HOPPER

Did you know that Johnny Payne, who plays those he-men roles, and is so darned nice, got his first break as a dancer in "Death In The Afternoon?"

Penny Singleton, Dagwood's heart-throb on the screen, stalled her car in a "no parking" zone. Almost got a ticket till policeman recognized her. Said: "Anyone as dumb as Blondie would do that. Make it snappy."

Rudolf Friml showed up at Metro commissary the other day with Chinese star Soo Choa Lai on his arm.

Sigrid Gurie's new husband installed swimming pool for her with huge map of Norway on its bottom. How about a map of Brooklyn as companion piece?

J. P. McAvoy will do a Satevepost yarn on Clark Gable. Says he thinks Spencer Tracy is getting too sanctimonious, playing priests and newspapermen turned missionaries. Well, Spence will be a rough, tough Indian scout in "Northwest Passage." That should satisfy him.

A much disliked studio head became annoyed at one of his director's delay in finishing a picture . . . a delay caused by illness in the director's family. He wired the director: "Meet me at Santa Anita on Christmas Day for the races, or won't you be through with the picture by then?" Director wired back: "The picture will be finished long before you get into 'Who's Who.'"

Warners tried to tell me Jimmy Cagney doesn't get seasick, and I mentioned it to Raoul Walsh who's directing Jimmy in "The Roaring Twenties." And did he roar? "Why, Hedda—that boy even gets sick in drydock." And on that picture with Cagney and Humphrey Bogart are old-timers Maurice Costello and Stuart Holmes who hadn't worked together for 28 years. Also Paul Kelly, Lottie Williams, Clara Horton, Creighton Hale and Jack Clark. They seem happy they don't have to carry the burden of stardom; its weighs heavily.

Inventor Charlie Ruggles has made a useful contribution to the gentle art of "dunking." It's a doughnut clamp with handle guaranteed not to strain knuckles or dribble coffee on your dress.

Anita Loos and Niece Mary Anita are laughing at the latter's reported engagement to Eddie Duchin. May said: "It would be like being engaged to my own brother." Adores him, of course, but there's never been the slightest romance. His wife was Anita's best friend—his baby is right here under her daily supervision. It's very embarrassing because Mary's beau—a young playwright—is on his vacation and may get the wrong idea!

English Director Robert Stevenson, famed for "Ninety Days a Queen," starts work at Selznick on Somerset Maugham's "The Letter," the play Jeanne Eagles made famous.

Dick Powell knew Joan would never believe it, so snapped picture of a church with this sign in front: Sermon for Sunday, "What Is Hell?" And beneath it, "Come and listen to our organist every afternoon."

Bergner Plays A Dual Role In Novel Film

'Stolen Life,' at Little, Is Story Of Twin Sisters

The ever-fascinating Elizabeth Bergner returns to the screen in "Stolen Life," which opened yesterday at the Little Theater.

In a dual role, the noted actress is allowed the opportunity to indulge her peculiarly gamine personality both for good and evil. Her understanding portrayal of the sympathetic character is imbued with that wistfully shy manner so uniquely hers, while the undesirable figure possesses an undertone of selfishness which is not altogether so credible.

But "Stolen Life" is essentially the study of one character and, as such, all the other figures may acceptably pale beside it. The story itself is as patent a drain on the credulity as are those plays of Shakespeare which similarly tell of twins and the situations which arise through mistaken identity. One is not intended to swallow the whole as truth, but, instead, to note the effects of these trumped-up situations upon a vital central figure.

For the film tells of two sisters, identical twins, whom even the father commands to part their hair on opposite sides, so that he may tell them apart. The one is flirtatious and shallow, the other reticent and sincere. When the soft-eyed Martina meets an ambitious young mountain climber, their relationship quietly develops into love. But Sylvina encounters him and pulls him from her sister into marriage. While he is on an expedition, the two sisters are caught in a squall at sea. When the married vixen is drowned, shy Martina, with her dead sister's wedding ring clutched in her hand, is thought by her rescuers to be the young wife. When she decides to further that impression to all the world, she fools no one, not even herself.

Once this singular situation is accepted, "Stolen Life" and the elusive Miss Bergner will capture your attention and imagination. Michael Redgrave, remembered from "The Lady Vanishes," is the husband, a role which Adapter Margaret Kennedy did little more than sketch.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 29.—A surprising development on "South of Pago Pago" came to light today when we learned that Jon Hall would not star in the much advertised picture. His place has been taken by Clayton Moore, the 6-foot former trapeze artist, who has become well known as Lupe Velez' current heart interest. He was formerly with the circus and that is where he acquired the muscular physique necessary for this South Sea idyll.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Young Moore, whose real moniker is Jack Carleton, was discovered actually by a fluke. He made a test with a girl Eddie Small was considering for the femme lead and Small became more interested in Moore than in the girl. William Holden was discovered in exactly the same way when he tested with a girl for "Golden Boy." She was forgotten and he was signed. Poor Jon Hall, his screen career has been one long series of disappointments since his sensational success in "Hurricane."

The story of the violin-playing prizefighter won't end with "Golden Boy." Lewis Meltzer and Daniel Taradash, who adapted the Clifford Odets play for Columbia, have been commissioned to write a sequel, "The Dame from Newark." This time Barbara Stanwyck gets the breaks, with young William Holden playing second fiddle to her. "Golden Boy" was essentially Holden's picture, but this time her story will be told more completely. Columbia and Paramount have a joint contract with the boy. Harry Cohn very cannily refused to give him "Golden Boy" without the right to make further pictures starring him.

Of all the movies Paul Muni has made, none was more significant in his career than "The Valiant," his first for the old Fox company. He appeared again in it on the radio on a Hollywood Hotel program for me. It is the somber, dramatic story of a condemned man who chooses death rather than talk. Twentieth Century-Fox will revive it for Lloyd Nolan, who recently asked to be relieved of his Paramount contract. I was very interested to hear that Mae Marsh gets the important mother role. Sol Wurtzel saw her in a bit in "Drums Along the Mohawk" and decided to give her this break. Jean Rogers, youthful TCR star, has the romantic role opposite Nolan.

A chatty letter received today via the Atlantic Clipper from Dick Thorpe, who is in London with his family. "The Busman's Honeymoon" starts September 11, war and Hitler permitting. The Thorpes have taken a country place and are enjoying their visit—or were until war threats made it imperative to carry along gas masks wherever they went. The Thorpes live near the 120-acre estate of the Robert Montgomerys and, according to the director, his star has become a favorite with all the important British titles. This last week Bob sent Mrs. Montgomery and the children to a farm in Ireland to await war developments.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Constance Bennett planes in early Thursday morning and Gilbert Roland doesn't deny his happiness. All Connie's friends believe she will start divorce proceedings from the Marquis de la Falaise in California immediately; the friends of Al Scott, formerly married to Colleen Moore, were shocked today to hear that he is the latest infantile paralysis victim. Bert Allenberg's son, who was stricken Saturday with the same malady, was reported very much better today; funny mixup at the Trocadero was Lana Turner dining with Willis Hunt, and his divorced wife having herself a good time at a nearby table with Bob Ritchie and Howard Hughes and also there was Greg Bautzer, once Lana's heart beat, with Gene Tierney.

Reports that Eugenie Humberstone, Lucky's sister, will wed Lee Powell, the original lone ranger, are denied by the young lady herself; Anita Loos hostess at a small luncheon party at the Beverly Derby for Eddy Duchin; Lucille Fairbanks, really one of the town's beauties, at the Victor Hugo with Jerry Wald; George Barnes, ace cameraman, has been borrowed from Twentieth Century-Fox by David Selznick to photograph "Rebecca;" Anatole Litvak looking depressed, dining at the Delhaven alone; Jackie Searle, former child "heavy," has won a reputation as a prize-winning rider in the steeplechase races. He is now 18 and will be an attraction at the Pomona Fair; the Paul Munis have sold their Palos Verdes home; Gertrude Niesen and David Warner, the agent, a new Hollywood twosome.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Athens, Ga., Adopts Beery as Citizen

Wallace Beery has been "adopted" by the city of Athens, Ga.—and he has two certificates to prove it. The star received official notice from the Hon. A. G. Dudley, mayor of Athens, that he had been made an honorary citizen. He was also given a certificate as honorary sergeant of police.

Beery, planning a visit to this city, following completion of "Thunder Afloat," says he hopes to include a stop in Athens "to meet fellow citizens of the community, and salute officers in the police department."

Duce Reported Staying Hitler's Move on Danzig

Held Offering Concrete Proposals to Settle Nazi-Polish Questions

Rome, Aug. 29.—Premier Mussolini will personally intervene with concrete proposals for solution of the Danzig crisis if the current Anglo-German negotiations fail, an authoritative source asserted tonight.

Such a personal intervention by Il Duce would climax his reportedly strenuous insistence to Fuehrer Hitler that there be no war over Danzig.

It is reported the Italian premier's attitude was clearly stated to Hitler by Foreign Minister Ciano several weeks ago at Berchtesgaden, when Hitler is believed to have outlined to Ciano Germany's Danzig campaign.

According to a reliable informant, Mussolini last week delayed—perhaps halted—the outbreak of war. This authoritative source said Hitler had planned to occupy Danzig last Friday night, in spite of Anglo-French determination to go to war if Poland's independence or integrity is affected. Hitler stayed his hand at the personal admonition of Il Duce, this source declared.

Revealed Plans to Duce

Hitler is said to have revealed to his axis partner his plans to occupy Danzig last Friday, whereupon Mussolini immediately dispatched word to the German Fuehrer to call off his scheme.

The British Ambassador to Italy, Sir Percy Loraine, collaborated with Il Duce in drafting the communication to Hitler, according to this story, and at the request of Prime Minister Chamberlain, told Ciano that Britain was most anxious to attain a peaceful solution of all current European problems.

Supported by the British attitude, Mussolini is asserted to have sent a message to Hitler requesting that he contact Britain before resorting to force. Der Fuehrer reportedly followed this by dispatching four lengthy communications to Mussolini reportedly stressing Germany's determination to acquire Danzig immediately — but the planned occupation did not take place.

In this connection it is recalled that there were several telephone calls between Berlin and Rome Friday and Saturday, and that on Friday night Hitler saw the ambassadors of Britain, France and Italy.

Supported by Reports

It was on Friday night that Hitler handed British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson his first communication to the British government, to which Britain replied on Monday.

Also, on Friday night, Hitler gave French Ambassador Coulondre the communication which led to the exchange of letters between Der Fuehrer and French Premier Daladier which were published by the German government on Sunday.

Further support for the Italian story is seen in the fact that there were widespread reports in Berlin Friday night to the effect that Hitler might march before dawn Saturday.

Lorsine Confers With Ciano

Rome, Aug. 29 (AP).—A British effort to influence Adolf Hitler further toward a peaceable settlement through the good offices of Premier Mussolini was reported in diplomatic circles tonight.

Sir Percy Loraine, British ambassador, had a half-hour talk with Italian Foreign Minister Ciano this afternoon. Neither the British nor the Italians would say what was discussed, but both indicated that Mussolini was an active go-between.

Meanwhile, Italian preparations for possible war went ahead.

The first appeal for Italians to move out of big cities appeared as an air raid precaution and to facilitate food distribution in the event of a conflict.

Food control, without rationing such as that in Germany, was begun in Libya, the Italian territory in North Africa which adjoins French-controlled Tunisia. Libya probably would be the scene of fighting in time of war.

Blackout in Rome

Civilians were required to fill out forms, distributed by the police, to show what service they would perform behind the lines.

Electric signs were extinguished in Rome tonight and some stores were lighted with dim blue lamps which already had appeared in the streets and in public conveyances as a defense against air attack.

It was the first complete black-out since the crisis began.

Civilian automobile traffic, already thinned by a new high gasoline tax, is to be prohibited beginning Sunday to save gasoline.

Today was the last day restaurants were allowed to serve more than one meat or fish to each customer.

There were vague rumors that a gigantic national mass meeting, like that which preceded Italy's advance into Ethiopia, would be called when the verdict of war or peace was known.

Italian railroad service within the country remained normal, but the Italian Ala Littorio airline suspended its service to Marseille.

Alhambra Begins Assembling Today

The vanguard of approximately 1,000 delegates to the eighteenth biennial convention of the Order of Alhambra, which opens for a three day session here tomorrow, is expected to arrive today. The Willard Hotel is the convention center.

Registrations will begin today with Walter I. Plant as chairman, assisted by Francis A. McCann, Joseph P. Doyle, Frank J. Govan, Symour B. Wools and Thomas F. Cummings. Joseph M. McKenna, of Washington, is among the grand viziers.

U. S. Detains Liners for Search

nations might be considered as potential belligerents, declined to enumerate all of them, observing only "any list certainly would include Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Canada, and probably Japan."

19 Taken Off

While making the search, which began yesterday for the Bremen and had previously been made on the de Grasse, immigration officials took 19 passengers off the Bremen and off the Normandie, in what Byron M. Uhl, immigration superintendent at Ellis Island, characterized as an immigration matter.

"There was nothing unusual about the passengers being held," he said. "It had absolutely nothing to do with the war scare or any unusual circumstance. There are always a number of passengers of any ship whose eligibility to land is questionable for such varying reasons as health, their ability to support themselves, and the validity of their passports or visas."

Gregory O'Keefe, assistant collector of the port, said the search of the Bremen was to determine whether the Bremen was carrying "implements of war proscribed by Presidential proclamation." Stephen B. Gibbons, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, expanded this to apply to all vessels and any others that may be searched.

Nazi Captain Protests

Durning said he hoped the search of the vessels would be completed by tomorrow afternoon. About 100 customs officers were assigned to the Bremen alone, on which Durning said nothing subject to seizure had been found, except a camera and an ikon, a Russian religious image, which were not declared on the ship's manifest.

Capt. William Drechsel, marine superintendent of the North German Lloyd Line, which owns the Bremen, bitterly protested the delay in the departure of the liner, which was due to sail at 6 a. m. yesterday, having abandoned her passenger schedule to adhere to the orders from Berlin to get back to the Reich.

He termed the delay "outrageous" and "an unfriendly act" and demanded of the German consulate in New York that the embassy in Washington file a formal protest with the State Department. The embassy said here it had not made representations as yet, but indicated "a communication" would be sent to the State Department today.

Drechsel said of the order from Durning to remain at dock until released: "I am surprised at this conclusion, for the ship has no mail aboard. We have announced the vessel is going back to its home port of Bremen and that it is going without cargo."

Americans Raise $49,000 for Relief In Tientsin Flood

Shanghai (Wednesday), Aug. 30 (AP).—Two American relief bodies here today appropriated 175,000 Chinese dollars (about $49,000) for relief of victims of the Tientsin flood. There had been strong appeals for help from United States diplomatic authorities in both Tientsin and Peiping.

More than 10,000 Chinese have been drowned, the Japanese Domei news agency estimated. Damage in the Tientsin district is estimated at more than $60,000,000.

The American Church Committee, representing American Protestant missions carrying on war relief in China, and the local committee of the American Red Cross supplied the funds.

Messages from American authorities in North China said at least 500,000 Chinese victims at Tientsin "are in desperate need."

Europe Poised With Greatest Armament World Ever Known

By the Associated Press

Europe is poised for war with the greatest armament the world has ever known. The world for more than a year has been building arms at the rate of a billion dollars a month, and most of this has been spent by European nations.

Following are the best available estimates on the army, navy and air strengths of the leading European powers:

Country	Men Under Arms	Naval Tonnage	Air Strength First Line Planes	Production Rate*
Great Britain	600,000 to 700,000	2,079,863	3,000 to 4,000	2,000
France	3,000,000	815,531	3,000	1,000
Poland	1,000,000	16,500	1,000	No Estimate
Germany	2,000,000 to 2,500,000	541,023	5,000 to 8,000	2,000
Italy	1,300,000	717,920	5,000	1,000
Russia	2,000,000	890,589	8,000	1,000

*—Number of planes per month. Production rate is considered highly important in air strength because of high losses during conflict. Some experts expect as much as 100 per cent a month.

Poland Calls More Reserves

ing over Polish territory on the Slovak frontier.

Rationing of gasoline was introduced in Poland for private cars. The limit was fixed at 5 quarts daily for each car.

With tension high despite an outward appearance of calm, patrol planes droned high over the city on continuous watch.

Some camouflaged trucks and automobiles chugged through the streets. Volunteers dug steadily in trenches.

Few Americans in Warsaw

Members of the United States embassy, consulate general staffs and newspaper correspondents were virtually the only Americans remaining here.

A number of American Jews of Polish descent who have been attending rabbinical schools in this country prepared to leave.

There was further sandbagging of public buildings.

Polish indignation over alleged treatment of Poles in Germany again was reflected in the press.

Charges in Germany that members of the German minority were being imprisoned in concentration camps drew the assertion that Poland maintained only one concentration camps for criminals and profiteers.

Responsible quarters declared there were only ten Germans, all convicted of crimes, at present in this camp.

Incidents at Danzig

Danzig, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Neutral observers in Danzig tonight believed that Polish-Danzig friction over local incidents would complicate any negotiations by the major powers.

Polish quarters threatened to hold up food trains to Danzig if Free City authorities continue to interfere with Polish freight trains in Danzig territory.

Danzig official quarters admitted they had held up two more Polish trains bearing iron ore. They also said that food transport from Paland was resumed yesterday after Poles had stopped several trains at the border.

Slovaks Must Provide Supplies

Bratislava, Slovakia, Aug. 29 (U.P.). Premier Tiso tonight ordered the people of Slovakia, under threat of Nazi court marshal, to provide horses and supplies for German troops pouring into the country to "keep the enemy from our frontier."

A proclamation said the country was under German military law which would deal with anyone of any nationality "threatening the safety of German troops in Slovakia."

Storm Delays Squalus Rising

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 29 (AP).—A southeast storm that kicked up heavy seas tonight delayed surfacing of the submarine Squalus until Thursday morning.

Salvagers predicted the storm would abate during the night and preparatory operations might be completed tomorrow.

Today Holds Key, Says Daladier

King Leopold it would consider their offer. But that no final answer could be made to any mediation proposal pending determination of Germany's attitude.

According to information received by Paris diplomatic circles there were two essential parts to the British note, a copy of which was sent to the French government. One concerned Germany's "urgent" demands for settlement of her claims to Danzig, the Polish Corridor and other concessions from Poland. The second concerned German-British relations in general.

Would Fight for Poland

London was understood here to have told Berlin of Britain's willingness to do all in her power to make possible direct negotiations between Poland and Germany, but declared flatly Britain would honor her guarantees to fight for Poland.

If such negotiations were carried to a successful conclusion, Britain was said to have indicated she favored general negotiations concerning colonial raw materials, disarmament and other underlying problems which have aggravated the Polish-German quarrel.

Premier Daladier had a long conference yesterday with Gen. Gamelin, commander in chief of all French armed forces. He also was closeted with Socialist Leon Blum, former premier, and other political leaders. As a result the senate, army, air and finance committees were called to meet this afternoon. A meeting of the Senate foreign affairs committee was set for Friday.

Bonnet Sees Bullitt

In a conference with United States Ambassador Bullitt, Foreign Minister Bonnet gave an up-to-date resume of developments.

The French Ambassador to Moscow, Paul Emile Naggiar, arrived in Paris, where he was summoned "on leave" after conclusion of the Soviet-German nonaggression pact. He is to confer with Bonnet today.

While Diplomats conferred, Paris continued preparations. Restaurants, cafes and other places where liquor is sold in the surrounding suburbs were closed at 11 p. m.

The capital remained calm, however, amid the worst war scare since the World War.

The Bourse, usual barometer of the French attitude which in the last few days has registered several drops, was firm yesterday. French government bonds rose an average of 2 to 3 per cent.

President Albert Lebrun celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday in the Elysee Palace and received congratulations from King George and the Kings of Belgium and Rumania.

Considerable curiosity is caused here by the announcement that Gen. Maxime Weygand has been entrusted with a mission by the French government to the Far East. Weygand, who was chief of staff to Marshal Foch, headed the French military mission to Warsaw that saved Poland in the war with Soviet Russia in 1920.

French Face Italy

Cannes, France, via U. S. S. Trenton to Washington, Aug. 29 (AP).—Thousands of French reservists have assembled in makeshift garrisons throughout the territory facing the Italian frontier—awaiting word from Paris as to whether there will be war or peace.

Telephone communications were closed to the interior, newspapers and telegrams were subjected to government censorship and the mobilized men knew little more than the average citizen today.

On the whole, however, life was not much upset. The requisitioning of automobiles, horses and mules progressed, accompanied by a reduction of the amount of gasoline furnished private cars and taxis. Government officials emphasized that the measures lacked emergency characteristics and food was still plentiful.

Troops were lined along the highways between Cannes and the Italian frontier. Senegalese sharpshooters and antiaircraft squads watched coast roads and bridges.

Eastward toward Italy moved tanks, armored cars and artillery, but authoritative reports said Italians were showing few signs of border defense.

Hitler's Reply 'Long'

Paris, Wednesday, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—This morning's newspapers reported that Adolf Hitler's reply to Britain's proposals regarding Poland was "long and full of strong objections," with the Fuehrer insisting that Germany's demands on Poland be met before other problems are discussed in amicable fashion.

Generally the newspapers considered the situation to be "as grave as ever."

Nazi Envoy Hits Polish Charges

The German Embassy issued a statement last night that it had a "wealth of documentary evidence" to support stories of violence against Germans in Poland.

The statement was in reply to one by the Polish Embassy Monday, charged that the Germans were spreading "completely false stories" for the "sole purpose of misguiding foreign opinion and governments."

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?
What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? Bread, meat, potatoes? No wonder you're constipated; you probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It means the kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines. It's this mass that helps a bowel movement.
The common sense thing to do is to eat a natural laxative food. Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast may give you just the "bulk" you need. And it gives you, in addition, Nature's great intestinal-tonic, vitamin B1. All-Bran is not a drug, not a medicine. Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Beyond This Crisis

Terribly grave as is the German-Polish dispute over Danzig and the Corridor, it is well to remember that it is only part of a larger question. That question is whether or not international relations can be organized in such a way as to eliminate those periods of extreme tension and threats of war which have occurred with increasing frequency during recent years.

The events of the next few days should determine whether the German-Polish dispute can be peacefully resolved. Unless that can be done there is not much point or purpose in discussing the larger issue. But even if war is averted this time the world will remain in a state of dire peril unless and until a far-reaching readjustment is made so that the rule of law and justice can replace the present state of complete international anarchy.

In other words, it is the task of statesmanship, even while coping with the desperate situation of the moment, to begin considering the larger aspect of the world crisis. Happily, there are indications that this is being done.

There was, for instance, an interesting note in Premier Chamberlain's speech in the House of Commons yesterday which indicated that the British government, for its part, is fully aware that there are problems beyond the Danzig issue, overshadowing though this is at the moment.

Mr. Chamberlain emphasized that in his message to Great Britain the Fuehrer had expressed a desire for an Anglo-German understanding of a complete and lasting character. The British premier welcomed that suggestion and declared that the British government would, when the proper time arose, seek the "opportunity of discussing with Germany the several issues, a settlement of which would have to find a place in any permanent agreement." And it is such a permanent agreement which is necessary to rid the world of recurrent crises almost as injurious to civilization as war itself.

As Premier Chamberlain went on to say, the first prerequisite to any general settlement is the solution of the present fundamental issue. First things must come first. But the ultimate aspects of the world problem cannot, even at this time, be ignored.

$114 Per Capita

Any one who doubts that taxes are a major influence upon business and employment would do well to analyze the estimates of total revenue collected in 1938 appearing in the Treasury's August Bulletin. Federal, State and local tax collections during that year amounted to $114.09 for every man, woman and child in the country. They absorbed nearly 22 per cent of the estimated national income.

Ten years ago it could rightly be said that funds collected for support of the Government were not a serious deterrent to business and employment. Since 1932, however, revenues collected by the national, State and local governments have increased by 80 per cent. When only a little less than one-fourth of the national income is absorbed in taxes, the laws through which this revenue is exacted may readily become a serious drag on recovery.

Nor does this rise in tax collections tell the entire story. Last year, according to Treasury estimates, all governmental units in the United States collected a total of $14,811,000,000. But these same agencies spent for general governmental purposes, exclusive of debt retirement, a total of $17,470,000,000. Fully to cover expenditures with revenue receipts would obviously require another abrupt hike in taxes.

Viewed from this background, there is nothing fantastic in the emphasis which John W. Hanes, acting Secretary of the Treasury, is placing on tax revision as a means of stimulating recovery. Undoubtedly the "appeasement" tax changes enacted during the last session of Congress are contributing to the present upturn of industry and employment. As Mr. Hanes points out, however, "much remains to be done." More far-reaching modifications designed to encourage the investment of our vast reservoirs of idle capital in productive enterprise will be expected next year.

The most gloomy part of the picture is the fact that actual reduction of revenue collected seems out of the question so long as government spending continues at its present volume. Congress will probably have to be content with making adjustments that will more equitably distribute the burden. But the stimulative effect of actual tax cuts should not be lost to sight when appropriations are being made.

A Living Lie

Very few adult Americans, during the past fortnight, have even pretended to be indifferent to the panorama of European war news in the daily papers. There are not many, throughout the length and breadth of the country, who have failed to gather anxiously around the radio for the foreign broadcasts by which the supply of information is made practically continuous.

The tremendous popular interest in the crisis has diverted attention from every purely national or local concern. Everywhere there is a feeling that it will be impossible for life to resume its normal course unless or until the present tension is resolved. Everywhere Americans realize that we are not merely observers, but potential participants, in what is going forward.

Two weeks ago a Gallup Poll showed 76 per cent of a Nation-wide cross-section of the opinion that the United States would be "drawn in" to another world war. Today such a vote would probably be even more pessimistic.

Yet in this crisis, of such obvious concern to the entire country, the influence of the United States for peace is almost negligible. Our interests and desires are regarded as of so little moment that Hitler has not even bothered to answer the personal plea addressed to him last week by President Roosevelt. Nobody in this country regards Nazi plans with indifference. But to the Nazis the American viewpoint, even when voiced by the Chief Executive, seems a matter of secondary importance.

The enormous power, the world-wide interests, the general intelligence and the pacific ideals of this country would all entitle it to be heard with respect when the issue of world war hangs in the balance. This claim to consideration is the stronger when so many of our people believe that they would inevitably be involved in the war which threatens. How, then, is one to account for the humiliating and wholly dangerous fact that in this protracted crisis the United States is scarcely more influential than Patagonia?

The answer is all too obvious. We have not merely adopted, but have lately refused to revise, a misnamed neutrality policy which is in reality an act of national abdication as a positive influence in world affairs. We have served notice, and confirmed it by the inaction of Congress at the last session, that whether or not there is war is immaterial to us, so immaterial that if war comes we shall make no distinction between the belligerents.

This misnamed neutrality policy is obviously a living lie. Many of its advocates, even, now admit that it would be abandoned as soon as war breaks out. The irony is that by then the mischief would be done. Indeed, the mischief has already been done, insofar as the Administration finds itself at this crucial stage largely deprived of power to use its enormous potential influence in behalf of peace.

The emasculation of America as a force for peace is shown by the contempt which Hitler can afford to show for pleas from a President who must regard Poland as being as much at fault as Germany even if the latter sees fit to start invasion.

But the injurious effects of mandatory neutrality do not stop there. In guarded language, but with unmistakable meaning, our present Ambassador to Germany points out that the neutrality law has actually helped to incite the Berlin government to aggression. The point now made by Ambassador Wilson and Assistant Secretary of War Johnson cannot be too often emphasized. The United States is in the incredible position of having actively helped to produce a crisis while nullifying its power to deal with the resulting situation.

The misnamed neutrality law will eventually be swept into the discard, whatever the outcome in Europe. Once the eyes of the American people are opened they will no longer tolerate this travesty of a policy in behalf of peace. But the damage already done cannot so easily be swept away.

At a time when the United States might have safeguarded the interests of all mankind its hands have been tied, its voice hushed, its influence to avert war sabotaged by indorsement of a lie which has not even the shoddy merit of being able to deceive.

War Of Curves

As a relief from the war of nerves is the war of curves. It was launched about a month ago by Mainbocher of Paris, who creates fashions with the same elan as Hitler makes crises. Only Mainbocher achieves his ends without the trappings of dictatorship and with no force or violence.

The burning issue is the question of corsets for women. The word came out of Paris, with Mainbocher its prophet, that corsets are again de rigeur. Mrs. Adam Gimbel, one of our own topflight fashion experts, echoed this ultimatum the very minute she stepped off the boat. Others took up the war cry and spread it to every corner of the land. The more timid ladies capitulated at once. The braver demurred. But the chances are that both those who applaud and those who condemn will sooner or later bow, if they can still bend over, to the decree.

But the Munich point in this struggle was not reached until Miss Hattie Carnegie, whose word carries no mean weight in such esoteric affairs, admitted on her return from Europe that she had bought some corsets although she couldn't "believe American women will suddenly wrap themselves up in corsets, when the uncorseted waistline is so much more natural and prettier."

On the same boat Miss Fira Benenson arrived, proudly bringing with her the original Mainbocher "stem torso" corset. Following the accepted practice in this kind of war, she announced that rumors of impending doom had been greatly exaggerated. "Without discomfort and undue strain," she said, the corset diminished the waistline by about two inches. After capitulation comes appeasement.

Those opposed to the corset argue that this is a palliative measure, and that once the offensive has begun to make headway the corset will get tighter and tighter, the territory covered smaller and smaller. At the time of going to press there was no telling what would happen. Usually reliable sources, well versed in fashion history, were said to be gloomy. Not for 25 years, they thought, had the rustle of bustles and the rattle of stays loomed so threateningly on the feminine horizon.

Intolerable Monopoly

The ease with which one company has tied up the construction industry in Washington seems the more amazing because of the drastic measures being taken by many governments these days to bring all man power and industrial resources under their control. It is the good fortune of the United States that it has escaped the regimentation which the imminence of war demands. Yet the spectacle of a relatively small group crippling all building operations in the Nation's Capital is a sign of weakness that cannot long be tolerated, even in peace time.

Most of the men idle because of this strike (the number is now estimated at more than 5,000) have no direct interest in the dispute between the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. and its employes. They are merely victims of a situation which a lenient policy has allowed to go from bad to worse. That fact alone seems to justify extraordinary measures to assure an adequate supply of sand and gravel for the construction industry here.

Still more astounding is the fact that a single company holding dredging permits from the War Department is, in effect, telling the United States Government that it cannot go ahead with its program of public construction in the Capital. Because this interference with its public-works program involves a labor dispute, the Government has patiently suffered delay, financial losses and inconvenience. It has assigned its mediators to the case with the object of assisting a reasonable solution. But even the moderate and constructive proposals of Mediator Colvin have been rejected, first by the union and now by the company.

The refusal of the company to accept the terms proposed by Mr. Colvin on Monday is particularly inexcusable. He had succeeded in persuading the strikers to go back to work immediately, without settlement of their differences with the management, but merely on the promise that negotiations for a settlement would begin within 30 days. In return, he asked only that the strikers be reinstated without prejudice and that the union be recognized as the rightful bargaining agent for workers in the company's plants.

If such even-handed suggestions are to be turned down flatly by the company, hope of settling the strike through continued negotiations seems remote. In the meantime the Government cannot be expected to let urgently-needed construction projects lie dormant and to transfer men thus made idle to the relief rolls. The time is ripe for emergency moves to secure sand and gravel from other sources and permanently to break any monopoly which makes the Government dependent upon a single company for essential building materials.

A Genial Censor

Donagh MacDonagh in the Saturday Review of Literature

On the grounds that it might be "subversive of public morality" and would tend to engender hatred among nations, Ireland's genial film censor James Montgomery (his Irish title, translated into English is "Scrutator of Shadows") has banned the American film, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Mr. Montgomery in spite of, or perhaps because of, his position is one of the wittiest men in Dublin.

Author of most of the good wisecracks of the past 40 years (it was he who said that the trees along the Dodder were more sinned against than sinning), he has been the friend of every writer in Ireland since he came to the use of reason. Despite the fact that he has been sitting in the dark looking at films for the past 17 years he still retains a fresh and lively interest in them; he says, as regards his views on film morality, that he is between the Devil and the Holy See.

Men Without Jobs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think the matter of millions of our people, young and old, male and female, being unemployed is a lasting shame to the ingenuity of the leaders of this great republic. The last chance for employment vanished when the Congress smashed the President's recommendations for appropriations such as housing, which would have given employment to thousands.

I consider it a travesty when a nation can and does appropriate billions for militarism and at the same time has millions of people wearing blisters on their feet trying to get a job.

I wonder how many Government officials realize the many hardships suffered by parents having grown children aged 20 to 30 years on their hands to clothe and feed while the above-described conditions exist?

The writer has, unfortunately, on his hands, 2 sons aged 25 and 30 (cannon fodder age) with good education and anxious to work. Both have filled out application blanks for employment in six Government offices. They are told almost daily "no vacancies because no appropriations." To my view there are no vacancies for the reason that a great many jobs are held by married couples or those with inside "pull" and that pull is far better than that of a member of Congress.

Is it any wonder the young generation is getting radical in its political beliefs? For results, scrutinize the next Federal election returns. P. J. W.

City's Health

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I appreciate so much your fine editorial in support of the Health Department's budget requests for the year 1941.

While Washington's health record undoubtedly can be improved and brought to parity with the best of America's large cities, what has been accomplished so far should serve as proof that in the Nation's Capital the possibilities of sickness prevention and life extension have so long been overlooked. Your help in securing the repair of this deficiency, I assure you, is greatly appreciated.

International Government

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now is the time to speak. The nations of the world need government for their own protection and general welfare. Let us establish not a government between States but an international government based upon those principles which we originated and in which we profess to believe—democracy and representation.

Once before the unrestricted forces of mankind made clear to us this necessity and a League of Nations was founded. This was not a democratic and representative government. Let President Roosevelt, if he is sincerely desirous of peace and the liberty and the welfare of the people of the world in general and of the people of the United States, in particular, fire this "shot for peace."

Let him propose—not that England, France, Scotland, Canada, Australia, Norway, Sweden, the United States, unite in some way to prevent war and foster peaceful enterprise—but let him propose that the English, French, Scotch, Canadian, Australian, Norwegian, Swedish and American people (and all others who believe in these principles) unite as individuals and form a larger government to accomplish those things which lesser governments cannot admittedly accomplish.

Concerning Noise

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Wentworth's article scoring unnecessary noise, in your paper this last week, struck a very responsive chord in all the people I know. Many have spoken to me about it and hope public opinion will not allow the subject to be dropped until real gain is noted along that line.

We think the article was very good because not only was the subject well covered but very interestingly so, because it showed a knowledge of past history and ability to "tie it in" with the subject today. A DEVOTED READER.

Less Individualism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It becomes obvious that the millions of human beings throughout the world are becoming more and more insignificant. Individualism seems to be gradually losing its meaning until there is every possibility that, eventually, it will become practically obsolete.

This viewpoint is not based entirely upon the fact that a few men are causing millions of others to wonder what their fate will be from one day to the next, but it is further substantiated by the fact that people all over Europe are becoming regimented. They are compelled to obey many orders and to follow various regulations affecting their very personal existence.

To me the fact that the people of London are being drilled in the proper use of the underground bomb-proof shelters, carries with it an important psychological factor. It is a factor that is capable of producing a disastrous effect upon the British personality especially should a war be waged for any considerable period. Imagine a society of human beings scurrying like ants in underground passages.

This is not pure exaggeration because when people are made to shrink before the whip of a "Legree," they unconsciously lose their feeling of personal liberty. I am well aware of the fact a recourse to such a thing is intended as a defense measure, but the fact remains that human beings are forced to subject themselves to the rigors of "governments."

The idea of people scurrying like ants, brings to mind a reference which the well-known Chinese writer, Lin Yutang, made to them in his book, "The Importance of Living." I dare say he was right when he expressed doubt that human beings can even be second to them from the standpoint of rationality.

Although man is the most perfect animal on the earth, and has been showered with many gifts, it seems that he is misusing his talents and is directing his powers in such a manner that he would ultimately destroy himself. Such misdirection of man's scientific knowledge will result in his own undoing.

The "men of destiny" in Europe could benefit themselves as well as their fellow men if they would relax and spend quiet evenings at home instead of wasting their efforts in a futile attempt to achieve the "supreme" role of "little tin gods."

Fountain Location

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The last session of Congress authorized the erection in Washington of a replica of the Columbia Exposition Fountain. In view of the strings attached by the authorizing resolution, the fountain should not be in the Capitol grounds; it should not be in the Mall, and so forth. I understand there has been some difficulty in selecting a suitable location.

It seems to me that there is only one place for the fountain, and although that place is not in the District of Columbia perhaps the backers of the project will be willing to wait for an amendment to the resolution at the next session of Congress.

I suggest, hopefully and with the feeling that it is a "natural," that the fountain be erected in the grounds of the proposed Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park.

Congress And Neutrality

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The members of our Congress who refused at the recent session to make common-sense changes or repeal of our present neutrality law may later at the bar of history be found stupid even though honest-minded accomplices in the greatest man-slaughter since the war of 1914-1918, for tremendous tragedies to civilization and human liberty, and an imminent threat to both North and South America.

If Herr Hitler is not to be stopped now, where and when can he ever be stopped? He has looted Bohemia and Moravia, and now would wring the neck of Poland at its Corridor. His lust for rape of other nations would extend wherever his lightning aircraft can go and his pioneer bunds can get organized for stirring unrest and agitating for his intervention. They are already strong in the New World.

Our Congress put additional boldness and bluster into both Hitler and Japan when it made it clear that nations fighting for their independence and cherished civilization would be shut off from supplies from our factories and farms.

Our hearts, if not our needed material and equipment for defense from ruthless attack, will go out to Poland in its hour of great stress, and to Great Britain and France which will try to defend her.

This is the land of Sobiesky, who at another great critical period of world history saved Christian Europe from the fanatical Moslems of his day; of Pulaski, who after very distinguished service in our War of the Revolution made the supreme sacrifice for our own liberty at the siege of Savannah in 1779, and of other great patriots, scientists and men of culture, such as Kosciusko, Mme. Curie and Paderewski. This land is certainly not deserving of the brutal fate Hitler is planning for it. Nor should France and England from whom we have inherited much of our best blood, traditions and culture, be needlessly imperiled in fighting for world ideals, by a contemptible neutrality of our own which will refuse to sell them means of defending honor, homes and even their women and children. But our Congress has not acted like "our brother's keeper."

The Post Impressionist

Sartor Resartus

I can remember, strange as it seems, when the sight of feminine human meat or cuticle above the metatarsals would make men run—the direction of the run being in some degree dependent on the age of the looker or the lookee or both. In these days since the acreage has so infinitely increased, one is reminded of the London busman who, observing a lady coyly pulling her skirts about her ankles as she climbed to the upper deck, said, "Garn, lydy! Legs ayn't no treat t' me!" One good descriptive term for the modern bathing suit is "the one-more-struggle-and-I-am-free bathing suit; or, poetically,

Nary back and nary sleeve;
Bust one stitch and—"Hello, Eve!"

The human race originally, I might ramblingly remark (and when it comes to remarking ramblingly I yield to none!) was deciduous from the start. Its leaves were discarded when the fall came. Then were the cumbersome garments of those early days donned—the don of a new era, and I don't care. If the coming of sinfulness was marked by the assuming of garments, we must be mighty nearly back to sinlessness again.

Garments thickened with the coming of horse-hair-upholstered furniture. They had to or our ancestors would have been tickled to death. One does not see modern femininity in its bathing suits—we see most of it protruding therefrom. Students of anatomy need steal no more cadavers. They need merely stick around the bathing beaches. There is a sort of "Now-it-can-be-told" air about the swim suits.

This is not confined to the lady folk—not by a jugful. Man himself in all his un-pulchritude is among those present and voting. There are men who look as you sort of thought they would, and there are those who seem to be crossed with or a throwback to the Hairy Ainu. The beaches and the cement curbing about the public bath pools and even the water in the pools are lined and festooned and passe-partouted with men who remind one of Kipling's Adam Zad the bear—"horrible, hairy, human."

The third listing is my own idea, just to be nice to some of the Tarzans I have witnessed lately. They make one wonder who left open the cage doors at the Zoo. One expects to see some of them beat their breasts and roar out the victory cry of one of Edgar Burrough's choicest bull apes.

Another change in the textile upholstering of the human form divine: I can remember, without straining a mental tendon, when the sight of a man with his shirt tail out called for ribald laughter accompanied by bending over and slapping the knee; when ridiculous songs were sung—something about "Dicky, Dicky Doubt," etc., and the loud announcement was made to the shirt-tail-outer that there was a letter in the postoffice for him.

Now a large portion—especially of the younger he ones—of our male population goes about with exposed shirt tail. Of course, it isn't technically a shirt tail (they will explain to you if you guffaw) because the tail isn't split at the sides. It was made for outside wear. But it makes Tartars of the young men just the same. Kipling said:

"The Russian is all right till he tucks in his shirt," meaning that he was really at heart a shirt-tail-out Tartar and ought to leave the drapery outside so as not to fool you. These modern garments, a Burbank hybrid of sweater and shirt, give the oldster of the hossan-buggy era a feeling that he is seeing somebody going around with his shirt tail out, just the samey.

Yet with all these changes that so befuddle and obfusticate the person over 50, there is a sort of crude justice clumsily asserting itself. Time was (and no earlier than yesterday) when a man had to wear a lot of clothes. Even today the number of places where he can sit coatlessly and eat his dinner are mighty, mightee skase, believe you me. All the while the women could eat in those places without enough duds on to flag a kiddie kar in broad daylight. Gradually that injustice is being abated. Men may go on the streets coatless, and some places they even let them take nourishment without looking as if they had their pockets filled with pemmican and were about to start to do an Admiral Byrd hermitic huddle among the penguins. Some of these days "they" (whoever that is) will let us boys be comfortable.

I am being consciously patient about the whole set-up; am keeping an eagle eye on trends. And the very minute I see a man going around—young or old—with lace on his exposed shirt tail, I'm gonna blow my top and make a scene from which American history will afterward be dated.

Different Rules

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "In the last analysis one man against the world," is the comment everywhere.

But, has not the United States been tremendously handicapped in its foreign negotiations by "one-man" rule? When Woodrow Wilson was endeavoring to make a just peace, one man in the Senate of the United States prepared a resolution which tied his hands.

When the United States deserted its allies and signed a separate peace, rejecting the League of Nations, seven men turned the tide.

When the neutrality act was up for reconsideration, one man prevented a committee report; when it was announced that the bill would be debated and voted on in the Senate, one man threatened filibuster to prevent its consideration.

The "one man" is not always in Germany. Occasionally he is found in the Senate of the United States.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Fiasco At Plattsburg

THE MANEUVERS of the First Army were a magnificent success, inasmuch as the true purpose of the demonstration was to show the people what a disgracefully clumsy, puny and ill-equipped military establishment they have and to frighten and shame them. About the best that Gen. Hugh Drum could say for his command was that the men rated "A" in health, effort and conduct. His critique runs into considerable wordage, with compliments here and there to the intelligence and patriotism of the soldiers, but the sum of it is that as an army, this one was terrible and the exercise a flop. From the tone of his remarks one is given to suspect that Gen. Drum spoke not in sudden alarm but with the exultant note of one who has proved his point.

And all this prompts a suggestion which a general on the active list probably would be afraid to make even if it he wanted to, that peacetime conscription would solve many of the problems that showed up so glaringly in the fiasco at Plattsburg.

Under the present method the National Guard soldiers are doing their country a patriotic favor above and beyond the minimum requirements of their citizenship, and the proposal, sometimes heard, to make permanent the CCC and introduce military training into the corps is just about perfect, except that it is brutally undemocratic. If the CCC were converted into something on the order of Adolf Hitler's labor corps, whose members drilled with spades, the result would be that sons of the poor would be honored with the privilege of getting shot up in the early stages of the next war, if any, while other young men were being gathered up, sorted, sifted and taught the rudiments.

More Patriotic Than Most Men

ALTHOUGH THE National Guard in peacetime often is used to perform degrading political dirty work for the likes of Huey Long and the Governor of Rhode Island, who called the troops to punish a man who had called him a special kind of liar, these men seem a shade more patriotic than any other element in the country, because they are not soldiers by trade and serve only because they want to.

If much of the present equipment is junk, as seems to be the case, and there isn't anywhere near enough of that to enable the existing numbers to go through the motions, that lag in modernization and quantity would be taken up in a short time if military duty were made an even thing to all sound males. The term need not be longer than just enough to familiarize the men with the simpler facts of life in the Army, and the turnover would establish a reserve on a democratic basis.

And the officers would get some practical training in the kind of work which, from lack of experience due to lack of opportunity, they seem to have bungled at Plattsburg. Drum didn't exactly say they bungled, but a perusal of his pep talk will leave an impression that he wanted to get that idea across without unnecessary damage to anybody's feelings. After all, it wasn't their fault, but the fault of a country which let the Army get into this rundown condition.

Pleasant Equivalents For 'Incompetent'

WHETHER OR NOT conscription, or, in a nicer phrase, universal military service, is an unnecessarily large remedy, there is no escaping the fact that Gen. Drum in his final review of the exercises used great ingenuity in devising pleasant equivalents for such words as "inefficient," "incompetent" and "terrible." Maybe the lottery or draft system would suffice to train enough soldiers to constitute a safe minimum and to give the officers, including the Regulars, as well as Reserve and National Guard, the workouts which they require.

As to equipment, the U. S. A. may fumble along as usual and then, when the thing happens, go scurrying around trying to borrow shoes, drawers and things which go "boom" from friends who are less provided with the materials and facilities for making them than a nation which constantly brags of its efficiency.

Drum says, "the shortage of essential man power and modern combat equipment has been recognized in all our exercises," and "I estimate that more than 50 per cent of the men in this exercise have never fired their weapons in a combat course of instruction. Aside from the question of efficient preparedness, such a state is deplorable, inexcusable and certainly unfair to this fine manhood who may have to face the crisis of war."

This critique is the real success of the maneuvers, and he leaves a question whether at some future time he will be forced to haul it out of his file and say, "I told you so."

Chamberlain Talk To Commons

Prime Minister Urges Press to Exercise Utmost Restraint

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 29.—The text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's remarks to the House of Commons follows:

Since the House met on Thursday there has been little change in the main features of the situation.

The catastrophe as I said then is not yet upon us.

I cannot say that the danger of it has yet in any way receded.

In these circumstances it might perhaps seem it was unnecessary to ask the House to meet again before the day which had been fixed, but in times like this we have felt that it was right that the House should be kept informed—as far as possible, continuously informed of all the developments of the situation as they take place.

Urges Restraint by the Press

That will continue to be the principle which will guide us for further meetings of this House. There is one thing I would like to say at this moment with regard to the press. I think it is necessary once more to urge the press to exercise the utmost restraint, at a time when it is quite possible for a few thoughtless words in a paper, not perhaps of particular importance, to wreck the whole of the efforts which are being made by the government to obtain a satisfactory solution.

I have heard that an account purporting to be a verbatim description of the communication of the British government to Herr Hitler was telegraphed to another country last night or this morning. Such an account could only be an invention from beginning to end.

Indeed, I think it is unfortunate that journalists, in the exercise of their profession, should take such responsibilities upon themselves, responsibilities affecting not only themselves but the inhabitants of the whole world.

No Change in Policy

I hope it will not be necessary this afternoon to have any long debate. I will attempt to give the House an account of the events of the last few days, but, of course, there has been no change in the policy of the government.

Therefore, there does not appear to be any necessity for an lengthy discussion. On the day after the House adjourned, that is on Friday, we received information in the course of the morning the German chancellor had asked the British Ambassador in Berlin to call upon him at 1:30 that day.

In the course of the afternoon we were told by telephone that Sir Nevile Henderson had had an interview lasting about one hour and a half with Herr Hitler and that he was sending us an account of that interview; that Herr Hitler had suggested to him that it would be a good thing if he were to fly over to this country the next morning in order to give us a verbal and more extended account of the conversation.

We received a record of the interview with our ambassador on Friday evening, and it was not completely deciphered until after midnight. I myself did not see the whole of it until Saturday morning. On Saturday Sir Nevile Henderson arrived by airplane from Berlin shortly before lunch.

Anxious For Careful Study

We understood from him that in Berlin it was not considered to be necessary that he should go back the same day, as the German government were anxious that we should give careful study to the communication he would make to us.

Accordingly we devoted the whole of Saturday and Sunday morning to a very careful, exhaustive and thorough consideration of the document which was brought to us and of the reply which we proposed to send back, and our final answer was taken by the ambassador yesterday afternoon when he flew back to Berlin and delivered it to the chancellor last night.

I should be glad if I could disclose to the House the fullest information as to the contents of the communication exchanged with Herr Hitler, but the honorable members will understand that in a situation of such extreme delicacy and when issues so grave hang precariously in balance it is not in the public interest to publish these communications or comment on them in detail.

I am, however, able to indicate, in quite general terms some of the main points with which they deal.

Welcome An Opportunity

Herr Hitler was concerned to impress upon His Majesty's government his wish for an Anglo-German understanding of a complete and lasting character. On the other hand he left His Majesty's government in no doubt as to the urgency of settling Polish-German questions.

His Majesty's government have also frequently stated their desire to see the realization of such an Anglo-German understanding and, as soon as circumstances permit, they would naturally welcome an opportunity of discussing with Germany the several issues, a settlement of which would have to find a place in any permanent agreement.

But everything turns upon the manner in which the immediate differences between Germany and Poland can be handled and the nature of the proposals which might be made for any settlement, for we have made it plain that our obligations to Poland, cast into formal shape by the agreement signed on August 25 (Friday last), will be carried out.

But as the House will remember His Majesty's government have said more than once publicly that German-Polish differences should be capable of solution by peaceful means. Meanwhile, the first prerequisite, if there is to be any chance of useful discussion, is that the tension created by frontier clashes and by reports of incidents on both sides of the border should be diminished.

Waiting For Reply

His Majesty's government accordingly hope that both governments will use their best endeavors to prevent the occurrence of such incidents, the circulation of exaggerated reports, and all other activities that result in dangerous inflammation of opinion.

His Majesty's government would hope that if an equitable settlement of Polish-German differences could be reached by free negotiation this might in turn lead on to a wider agreement which would accrue to the lasting benefit of Europe and of the world at large.

At this moment, the position is that we are waiting for the reply of Herr Hitler to our communication. On the nature of that reply depends whether further time will be given to the exploration of the situation and for the operation of many forces which are working for peace.

A waiting period of that kind is often very trying. Nothing, I think, can be more remarkable than the calm which characterizes the attitude of the whole British people. It seems to me that there are two explanations for that happening. The first is that none of us has any doubt as to where our duty lies.

There is no difference of opinion among us. There is no weakening of our determination, and the second is our confidence that we are ready for any eventuality.

No Rationing Cards

The House might like to know one or two particulars of the preparations which have been made.

Obviously there are many things which I could not very well say here because they could not be confined to those I see around me. What I say, therefore, must be in somewhat general terms.

Some of the measures which we have to take, such as those in connection with requisitioning, necessarily must cause some degree of inconvenience to the public. I am confident that the people of the country generally recognize that the nation's need must now be paramount, and that they will submit willingly, or even cheerfully, to any inconveniences or hardships that may be involved.

At any rate, we have not had to begin here by issuing rationing cards.

To deal first with the active defense of the country, the air defense of Great Britain has been placed in a state of instant readiness. The ground antiaircraft defenses have been deployed and are manned by the territorial antiaircraft units.

The regular squadrons of the Royal Air Force have been brought up to war strength by the addition of the necessary reservists, including a proportion of the voluntary reserve.

The fighter and general reconnaissance squadrons of the auxiliary air force have been called up and are standing ready, and the balloon barrage is in position.

Observers At Their Posts

The observer corps are at their posts. And indeed, the whole warning system is ready night and day to be brought into instant operation. The coast defense units are ready and are manned by the coast defense units of the territorial army.

Arrangements have also been made for protection by national defense companies and by militia and by units of the territorial army of a large number of important points whose safety is essential for the national war effort.

As for the navy, the House will remember that in July last it was announced that the reserve fleet would be called up at the beginning of August in order to take part in combined fleet and air exercises.

For that purpose a number of reservists of the reserve and auxiliary forces act and as a result the navy was in an advanced state of preparedness when the present crisis arose, and the whole of our fighting fleet, is now ready at a moment's notice to take up the disposition which would be necessary in war.

Advance State Of Preparedness

A number of other measures have been taken in the past week to increase the strength of our naval preparedness. Naval officers in charge of various commercial ports have been appointed and have taken up their duties, and naval port and base defenses have been put in an advanced state of preparedness.

The admiralty has also assumed control of merchant shipping, acting under the powers conferred upon them by the emergency powers act. Appropriate instructions have already been issued to merchant ships in various routes, to units of the forces and a considerable number of movements have been carried out both at home and overseas. These arrangements form part of a prearranged plan to insure a greater state of readiness and a number of units could be moved to war stations before the outbreak of war.

The regional commissioners and their staffs are at their war stations. The main responsibility of the organization for civil defense measures rests with the local authorities and instructions have been sent to the local authorities to take preparatory steps so that action could be taken at the shortest notice.

Plans for the evacuation of school children, mothers and young children, expectant mothers and blind persons from certain congested areas have been evolved. Rehearsals of the arrangements for the evacuation of school children were carried out yesterday, and nearly a week ago the local authorities were warned to make arrangements for the extinction of public lights and to prepare the necessary aids to have the lighting extinguished.

Issue Still Undecided

Arrangements have also been completed for the calling up at short notice of the personnel of the air-raid precaution services and duty officers will be available and necessary preliminary steps have been taken to prepare hospitals for the reception of casualties.

I have given these instances of the steps which have been taken over and above the measures which have already been put in operation. Complete surveys have been carried out over the whole range of our defense preparations.

Preparatory measures have been taken in order to insure that precautionary measures, if and when necessary, could be readily given effect as rapidly as possible.

The issue of peace or war is still undecided. We still hope and will work for peace, but we will not abate any jot of our resolution to hold fast to the lines which we have laid down for ourselves.

History Repeats?

By Ernest K. Lindley

Historical Parallel

HERE IS A timely quotation:

"He hoped that, before so mighty a confederacy as was formed at Moscow, England would bend the knee . . . and humbly take rank with powers that had lived their day. The conqueror . . . might well believe that the men of Downing Street, expert only in missing opportunities and exasperating their friends, would not dare to defy the forces of united Europe, but would bow before his prowess and grant peace to a weary world. . . .

"But the means which he adopted were just those that were destined to defeat this aim. Where he sought to intimidate, he only aroused a more stubborn resistance; where he should have allayed national fears, he redoubled them. He did not understand our people; he saw not that, behind official sluggishness and muddling, there was a quenchless national vitality . . . If, instead of making secret compacts with Russia and trampling on Czecho-Slovakia; if, instead of intriguing with Italy and Japan, and thus reawakening our fears concerning Egypt and the Far East, he had called a congress and submitted all the present disputes to general discussion, there is reason to think Great Britain would have received his overtures . . . George VI's ministers had favored the proposal of a congress . . . and they would doubtless have welcomed it from Hitler . . . had they not known of far-reaching plans which rendered peace more risky than open war. This great genius had, in fact, one fatal defect; he had little faith except in outward compulsion; and his superabundant energy of menace against England blighted the hopes of peace which he undoubtedly cherished."

Moscow Is Tilsit 132 Years Later

WITH THE alteration of only a few names, these quotations are from the Life of Napoleon by J. H. Rose, a standard English work. They refer to the position of England immediately after July 7, 1807, when Napoleon and Czar Alexander I of Russia allied themselves by the Treaty of Tilsit. (These are the changes made in the quotation: Tilsit becomes Moscow; Prussia becomes Czecho-Slovakia; the Sultan of Turkey becomes Italy; the Shah of Persia becomes Japan; India becomes the Far East; George III becomes George VI; and, of course, Napoleon becomes Hitler.)

The Treaty of Tilsit flabbergasted England quite as much as the Russo-German agreement did 132 years later. Russia was the ally of England, as was Prussia, in the coalition which was then striving to check Napoleon. Three weeks after Napoleon had defeated the Prussians and Russians at Friedland, he converted Russia into an ally. It was a combination which might be expected to dominate Europe—and, in fact, did so. It was an economic as well as a military combination. Russia joined Napoleon's "continental system," a blockade in reverse, aimed to strangle England. On the military side Russia was to get its compensation in the Baltic (Finland, Sweden) and at the expense of Turkey (with which Napoleon had allied himself only six months earlier.)

The Treaty of Tilsit was preceded by the same kind of fumbling on the part of England that led to the Russo-German agreement of 1939. England had urged Russia and Prussia to fight but had given little aid. To quote Mr. Rose again, the British cabinet "clung to its old plan of doing nothing and doing it expensively." Its behavior led the Czar to say to the British Ambassador: "Act where you please, provided that you act at all." The British finally decided to send an expeditionary force to northern Germany. "But," as Mr. Rose recites, "with the fatality that then dogged our steps, that decision was formed on June 17, three days after the coalition was shattered by the mighty blow of Friedland."

England Was Left Without An Ally

TILSIT LEFT the British in a much worse hole than they are in today. It left them without an ally, a nation of about 10,000,000 people facing a continent dominated by a great military combination. At that time the British conflict with revolutionary and Napoleonic France had been going on for 14 years and three successive coalitions formed by the British had been smashed. But the British began again, by imposing an "alliance" on Denmark, under which the British coldbloodedly captured and sailed away with the Danish fleet. (Watch Denmark again if the Germans move on Poland). Eight years later came Waterloo.

Historical parallels can be misleading. But what the British are gonig through today is an old experience. British cabinets have bumbled along before when the life of England was at stake. Hitler changes direction, makes and breaks promises no more quickly than Napoleon did.

Napoleon misjudged, catastrophically for himself, the character of the British. It begins to look as if Hitler had made the same mistake.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Ecrasez l'Infame!

DO YOU FEEL as I do—a fantastic, dreamlike, unreal quality—about everything that has happened in this week of strain? Something ominous, which is not fear of war? Something that fills the nerves with foreboding, which is not foreboding of a great struggle? A sense of sickness—as though all the world and everybody in it, and you and I, were sick in our nerves and in our brains and in our hearts.

We hang on our radios and listen to persuasive voices retailing news and "interpreting" events. I listen to my own voice on the radio "interpreting" events. It seems like somebody else's voice.

We read the diplomatic notes exchanged between the heads of states. (Never did they seem more like heads of states. Never less like spokesmen for nations of people.)

The letter of Premier Daladier on Saturday to Adolf Hitler. "Very esteemed Herr Reichskanzellor! . . . In this hour . . . severe responsibility . . . no doubts as to my amicable feelings . . . strengthen peace . . . assert an upright co-operation."

And the reply of Adolf Hitler: "I, too, have never overlooked . . . grave responsibility . . . old front fighter . . . horror of war . . . tried honestly to remove . . . tried year after year . . . clear decision made difficult . . . do not doubt my sense of honor."

Issues Carefully Phrased, Formulated

THE ISSUES are carefully phrased and formulated. Nations are perhaps preparing for war. The heads of states are writing the white papers now by which history will judge them. The issue, they say, is not Danzig or the Corridor. The issue, they say, is whether Germany is willing to negotiate without threat of force.

Britain, France and Poland—who are Britain, France and Poland? Did you ever meet them? —have asked for peaceful negotiations.

Germany—who is Germany? Did you ever meet it?—demands immediate "righting of a great wrong."

The words are all hollow. It makes one sick to listen to them—wherever they come from, on all sides. And now I know what it is that gives us this sense of sickness. It is that nobody in the world is saying one simple truthful word.

Nobody is saying not only what he thinks but what he knows. What everybody knows. And that simple truthful word is that the world will go on like this, in crisis after crisis, as long as the instruments of power of a great nation are in the hands of a man who is an arsonist, a liar, a murderer, a blackmailer and a thief.

This is what makes us sick inside. The word which is meant to say strong, true things that everybody knows, that every newspaper correspondent has known for years, that Mr. Chamberlain knows, and Lord Halifax knows, and M. Daladier knows, and the common people all over the world know, not excluding millions of Germans.

Super-Racketeers Of History Rule

WE KNOW that Germany is ruled by a gang. By the superracketeers of history. We know that they came into power by lies, by promises that they never intended to keep, by throwing the country into a panic; that they made a final coup de grace by setting fire to their own Reichstag and by blaming it on somebody else; that a year later they went on a rampage of wholesale murder; we know that it is they who "occupy" a great country, and have tortured the innocent, stolen the national wealth, often for their own personal uses, and preyed, like pirates, on the world.

We know that Hitler has broken every promise that he ever gave.

He made a nonaggression pact with Poland in 1934—at the point of Marshal Pilsudski's pistol, for the late Marshal Pilsudski understood the nature of Mr. Hitler and his movement. Hitler broke it unilaterally the moment he was ready to strike. In between, on four different occasions—the dates are January 26, 1935; November 5, 1937; February 20, 1938, and September 12, 1938—he reiterated publicly that he was satisfied with the present arrangements regarding Poland and that there was no cause of contention between the two nations. His foreign minister, Ribbentrop, as late as January 26, 1939, denied that Germany had any quarrel with Poland.

And on September 26, 1938, speaking on the Sportspalast in Berlin, Hitler said: "The Sudetenland is the last territorial demand I have to make in Europe."

Talk About Peaceful Negotiations Is Bunk

THEREFORE ALL this talk about "peaceful negotiations" is bunk, and everybody knows it. Everybody knows that you cannot make any kind of an agreement, under threat of force or without any threat of force, during a mobilization or without a mobilization, that will be worth anything from one day to another with the present "government" of Germany.

Everybody knows that his "government" rules by a camarilla, and a pretorian guard of finks, thugs, informers, terrorists and professional liars calling themselves propagandists; that it has corrupted the word, the word of truth, as it has never been corrupted.

Everybody knows that this government fills all countries with its spies and propagandists—propagandists who have not even anything to propagate; revolutionists without a revolutionary idea; ideologists without an ideology; for where is the ideology that can make a front against communism and switch from one moment to the next to a "Heil Hitler—Rot Front!"

The Frenchmen who twice this year have marched to the Maginot line have not gone in order to secure the right to "peaceful negotiations." The Englishmen and women who have equipped themselves with gas masks and prepared for air raids for the second time this year have not done it for a legalistic conception. They are not prepared to fight for the Polish Corridor or Danzig.

Cry In Their Hearts Is 'End This Infamy'

THEY ARE PREPARED to fight to get rid of Hitler. The cry in their hearts is "end this infamy! End this rule of blackmail! End this barbarian persecution which is the more disgusting because it justifies itself in unctuous words about 'purity of race!'"

Whatever the governments may say in their diplomatic letter, the people of the world are becoming a posse on a manhunt. They are after somebody who has been preying on the world for too long.

This is the truth that everybody knows.

And disgust fills every heart. It rises, a gorge in every throat. To get rid of a man, and a camarilla around him, a whole world, a whole civilization, 300,000,000 people may have to go to war.

These people are alike in everything essential. They live in the same kind of houses; with minor variations they eat the same kind of food; they work at the same occupations; when they are permitted they read the same books and see the same plays; they listen to the same music; they have the same hopes; they worship the same God.

Not one of them anywhere in the world wants to go to war. Not a Frenchman, not an Englishman wants to bomb a single German town; not a German wants to bomb a single English or French city.

To work up the Germans, the propaganda ministry has to invent the most egregrious lies about atrocities. It has to provoke retaliations in order to claim that atrocities have been committed.

There Is No Belief In The Status Quo

THERE IS NO belief in the world in the status quo nor any desire to preserve it. There is something wrong with the status quo when in all countries there is either tyranny and slavery or unemployment and chaos.

The people of the world feel, somehow, in their nerves and hearts, and in their minds, too, that we might just as well be standing at the beginning of a great era of intelligent and affectionate cooperation as at the beginning of universal destruction. The will to that era is everywhere—in all countries, and not least of all in Germany. But it is being strangled to death. It is not only at Danzig that a hand is on the windpipe of a people struggling for breath. It is through the length and breadth of this earth.

That hand must be taken away. The leaders of states must know this. And woe betide a government that brings back for the second time in six months its soldiers from the trenches with another little victory for Hitler!

The Once Over

Mr. Dewey And The Farm

I

A farm boy am I every inch
(Or every other one);
I know the hardships and the pinch
Of plowing in the sun;
Owosso, deeply I love you,
Far from the city's strife—
'Twas there I first learned what to do
With vegetable life!

II

Owosso, dear Owosso, oh,
I love those memories
Before I shouted "Yes or no!"
At public enemies;
The chickens scratching all around—
The "buffs" with feath'ry legs . . .
It was through them, I guess, I found
The way to handle "eggs."

III

I raised tomatoes with my kin
And now I've found out that Tomatoes are tomatoes in Owosso or "Manhatt;"
The onion field I tended right
And reached this judgment wise—
An onion is an onion quite Regardless of its size.

IV

I learned to mow and pile the hay,
And that's a tougher job
Than stowing racketeers away
Or cleaning up a mob;
I learned to dig and dig away
With throbbing head and pulse;
That's why I dig and dig today
Until I get results.

V

I learned to use the rake and hoe
And found them no disgrace;
I even use 'em now, you know,
When working up a case;
I helped to milk the cows at night—
How near those farm days seem!—
And that is why I hate and fight
The crooks who cop the cream.

L'Envoy

The rising in the early morn—
The labor in the heat—
The memories of shucking corn
And binding up the wheat! . . .
I'm White House bound, some people say,
In Washington to reign. . . .
Those days upon the old farm may
They never come again!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Her Married Life a Nightmare of Emotional Insecurity For 16 Years, Woman Asks How to Find Peacce

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Sixteen years ago I met a man almost by chance. The way I happened to meet him is a long story and of no importance. It was in a busines way. At the time, I was a widow, 32 years of age, and he was 8 years younger. He began paying me marked attention and after some months, he asked me to marry him. I had a young daughter whom I was educating, and a small income, sufficient to keep up the home that had been left to me.

His mother, a woman of means, came to see me at my invitation, and spent a few days as my guest. She seemed to like me from the first and when I said I loved her son and would like to marry him, were it not for the differences in ages, she said: "If you were a younger woman, you would have no possible chance of happiness with my son. He is, and always has been, a law unto himself and I have shed enough tears over him to float a battleship . . . He leaves home any time he feels like it, and has ever since he was a boy of 11. I am telling you these things so that you will never be able to say that I did not learn you. But after being here with you these few days and seeing you as you are in your home and with your daughter, I believe if I searched the world over I could choose you to be the wife of my beloved son."

I married him. After several months of happiness, he disappeared one day and I was absolutely heartbroken, as we had had no argument of any kind. Time passed and a certain happiness returned. Then, one afternoon, the telephone rang and I heard his voice for the first time in eight months. I do not recall what we said, but he came home in a little while. I welcomed him. Later, of course, I tried to question him, but anything I said was met with silence.

In the 16 years we have been married, he has left me 11 times, for periods ranging from one month to eight months, and I have never known where he was . . . About two years ago, I began to know there was another woman . . . Now, this affair was the third he had had since I married him. Once again he left. I broke down and for nine months I was confined to bed with specialists and nurses in attendance.

Now we are together once more and things are no better than before . . . Of course, you know by this time that I am still in love with my husband and yet I have a feeling that all is not as it should be. But I do not think I could stand to learn, ever again, that he is doing the same thing over again. If he would act on the fair side and tell me, I would gladly give him his freedom, but after all, he has the comfort of a well ordered home and does not contribute one cent to its upkeep.

We never quarrel and the only time he is in the least disagreeable is when he comes home tired . . . I do not question him. I do not let him think I ever doubt him . . . I am afraid he will hurt me again, and then, too, 16 years is a long time and I have done so much for him . . . I do not think he loves me but there is something which makes his eyes fill with tears when I am feeling very ill.

I must tell you, in fairness to him, that he has been good to me in many ways and I think there must be something in his nature that causes his restlessness . . .

What course shall I follow? Shall I pretend indifference? Shall I continue to confess the love I feel for him? Since his last return, we have not lived together as man and wife, although he seems dependent on my company in many ways. If I leave the room, and he is there reading, he asks immediately where I am going and why, and will I please stay, and so of course I do. . . . Won't you please tell me what to do?

HEARTSICK.

Psychiatric Counsel Should Be Employed

DEAR HEARTSICK: The almost intolerable situation which you have endured for 16 years is the product of one sort of weakness on your part, and another sort of weakness on your husband's part. His is the weakness of the ingratiating parasite, who is a total stranger to a rational sense of personal and social responsibility, and blandly feeds on the spiritual and material resources of another. Yours is the weakness of the extravagantly sentimental pacifist, who is willing, blindly, to make unending sacrifices, rather than realistically face a brutal issue and assert mastery over it, by taking stout action to see that reason, order and justice shall prevail.

In the interminably prolonged crisis which exists today, your first obligation is to yourself. With your nerves shattered, your physical health breaking, and your very senses reeling under the cruel confusion of feeling and purpose invited by your husband's unpredictable, irresponsible behavior—you have an imperative necessity to take such immediate steps as will promote your return to health.

I have no doubt that your "complete breakdown," so-called, of two years ago, was as much induced by the fact that you were then, as now, passing through the period of the climacteric (in which, according to Webster's dictionary, "great changes in the constitution or health take place)," as it was due to your husband's repetitious betrayal of hope. At a period in life when you should have been guaranteed special emotional security, the incessantly shifting foundations of your marriage were shaken as by an earthquake for the eleventh time.

Small wonder that you took to your bed with nervous and organic disturbances. However, once the constitutional change, inevitable to middle age, has been effected, your system will (with reasonable care) recover its equilibrium, and you may look forward to a new lease on life: to a healthful enjoyment of the Indian Summer of your existence. But I believe that part of the "reasonable care" which you must provide for yourself—by way of underwriting your claims to future peace of mind—should consist of psychiatric re-education in sound social and emotional values.

You need to have the blinders of saccharine sentiment taken from your eyes. You need to learn how to size up this situation, in which you have been so long and so blindly involved, with intelligent detachment. You must learn how to analyze and evaluate your husband as objectively as though he were a stranger; and you must learn to look at your own performance in the same light. When you have learned this lesson—which psychiatry can teach—you will have won a decisive victory over past confusion. You will be, once more, what you haven't been for 16 years—a spiritually free woman; a quietly self-governing person, who clearly understands what she must do to preserve her integrity and peace of mind, and who has found the courage to do it.

My advice to you, then, is this: Take your problem to the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene (formerly known as the Washington Life Adjustment Center) at 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone ADams 1033. If you are not eligible for the free service provided by the institute you will be given a list of private practitioners from which to choose a psychiatric counselor who can help you.

Serenity and Relaxation Aids To Beauty

WANT TO KNOW why you never hear about the film stars' temperament? They don't have it any more because it's too expensive! No film company likes to sit around and wait for the star to get over a tantrum. Time lost is money lost!

And that's one reason temperament has gone out of fashion. But Madeleine Carroll, who is so beautiful she would probably be forgiven for temperamental displays, says there is an even more important reason—nervous outbursts take too great a toll of the star's looks!

"The stars who stay beautiful," she says, "cultivate a quality of serenity that saves them from a great deal of wear and tear. I think maybe the necessity for establishing serenity in their lives explains why it is that they stay beautiful."

Serenity Personality Factor

Miss Carroll is convinced that serenity is the greatest factor in a woman's personality; that it not only helps a woman to retain her beauty, but that it can actually make the plain woman attractive. The harder a woman works and the greater the pressure she is under, the more necessary it becomes to take a little time to relax physically and mentally.

If you are terrifically hard-worked, you may be inclined to think, "Oh, well . . . a film star has nothing to do but relax now and then." But that isn't so. Miss Carroll had just finished making a picture for Paramount when she stopped in New York on her way to England for a holiday. During the ten weeks that she was working, she had two days off, was at the studio every morning by 7 o'clock, left at 6:30 in the evening, and most evenings rehearsed for two or three hours on radio program.

It's just as hard for her to find a few minutes to relax as it is for anyone else. But she finds the time. She thinks the best way to relax is to lie flat on the back on the floor, with the feet propped upon a chair. This is to step up the circulation. Ten minutes a day of this, she says, works wonders.

Refuses to Worry

She couldn't relax so quickly if she didn't have another rule: never to worry about anything. She even believes that if women worry too much about their weight, they run a risk of becoming preoccupied with food and want to eat all the time.

Swimming and walking are her exercise program, but she doesn't always have the time to swim. She never misses her evening walk.

Mink Makes a Splendid Halo

The luxury of Eastern mink is framed to its best advantage here in a halo by G. Howard Hodge, creator of a whole new school of fur hats. For those who can afford a rich coat of Persian, silver, fischer or mink, there is no greater compliment than a toque or cap in twin furs. Rumor has it that long before fur coats are worn this winter, the fur hat will be used for accents with fall suits

Fall Hats to Make Husbands Happy

Designer Hodge Says 'Ladies' Will Replace Hoydens of Summer

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

MEN are in for a revival of chivalry this winter as a result of women's return to gracious feminine fashions. Respect and admiration will be mingled in their glances as they scan the new season's millinery headlines. And gallantry—it will no longer be a lost art when husbands discover wives wearing exquisite hats in the great lady tradition, rather than playing hoydens in mad "monkey" caps as they did all summer.

Mr. Hodge

That's the belief of one of America's most astute millinery creators who, although personally responsible for every fine hat that comes from his Fifth avenue workrooms, prefers to be known as an open minded business manager and as the proud father of a beautiful daughter, now studying at the Sarah Lawrence College in New York. The affable, talented man in question is G. Howard Hodge, who is one of the pioneers in the all-American school of design, and who was a visitor here yesterday.

Men Responsible

Between interviews on Jean Abbey's radio program, Mr. Hodge elucidated his theory that men themselves are responsible for the return to feminine hat normalcy. Speaking not as designer but as "an average man," he said, "men can once more be charmed by hats that really sit, not nest, on the head."

Aside from the new way hats hug the cranium, Mr. Hodge cited the importance of rich hat furs to match individual fur coats. Even the less expensive furs, like London dyed squirrel, have been given a true mink coloring and texture and worked into gay young pill-boxes or toques. Most exciting of his preferred furs is the ruby dyed silver fox, its silver guard hairs glowing beneath its red gold.

Types Suggested

As a guide to girls who have planned to put their all into a fur cap this fall, the suave Mr. Hodge suggested:

First, beaver or mouton as a sturdy, practical hat for college girls when worked in its brash young way into Scotch caps with felt streamers.

A black ermine turban a little later on for the true sophisticate for her big nights at the opera or just for setting new styles here and abroad.

Sable dyed fitch for budgeteers who want a fur cap that looks like millions at far less than that. Pinwheels and halos are best in this newly smart fur, or the real Eastern mink can be used to frame the face.

Finally, Persian lamb, sheared close for its first great fling at youth. It is now done in cuff turban shapes having completely lost its former old lady complex.

And, as a final suggestion, the famous stylist urged one good hat, carefully chosen to suit individual features (regardless of prevailing best sellers), in preference to lots of unimportant little hats, which never look quite in place and never seem to elicit any compliments.

How Floors May Be Kept Clean

Painted floors or hardwood floors which have been shellacked or varnished and then coated with wax thrive on daily sweeping with a clean soft brush and wiping with a damp soapy cloth every week or so.

Floors covered with linoleum or oilcloth will do credit to the kitchen or bathroom if mopped with tepid suds. Tiled floors require scrubbing or mopping with hot soapsuds if they are to be kept spick-and-span. In either case daily washing will keep the floors attractive and obviate the strenuous work that may be needed if the washing is put off for more than a day.

Muzzles for Vacationists

SUMMER stay-at-homes will not have to listen to any tall tales of returning vacationists this fall, if Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League, is successful in the new reform she has instituted.

Mrs. DeGoofey

At her press conference yesterday, the famous reformer announced she was planning a rigid censorship of post-vacation chatter.

"Most of us are so worn down by the heat and the war crisis," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "that we haven't the strength to face the barrage of words that the hordes of returning vacationists will soon let loose on us. Therefore, I have drawn up a code which, with the aid of the Do Something About It League, I hope to have generally enforced. Here it is:

"First—All comment about either World's Fair is out. Already the material published on these events would, if placed end to end, reach at least to the planet Mars, so I can see no need for any oral discussion.

"Second—No private polls of public opinion may be inflicted upon any listeners. It is utterly immaterial to most of us how the filling station attendants and hot dog sandwich men along the highways feel about the third term, women's bustles, or other burning questions of the day. These people should be encouraged toward the better wiping of windshields and the buttering buns instead of trying to run the country.

'Spare the Horrors' To Be Dictum

"Third—There shall be no detailed accounts of seasickness or air sickness, or how dirty anyone got on train or motor, or of the conditions of tourist camps.

"Fourth—Positively no mechanical data concerning motor travel shall be presented. Anyone using such words as 'mileage,' 'detour,' 'carburetor,' 'knock,' 'blowout,' 'road map' or 'garage' will have his—or her—mouth washed with soap and water.

"Fifth—Anyone who begins an account with, 'We sailed from New York, July 16,' or 'We started at 5:17, daylight saving time,' or 'Now our first stop was Richmond——' will be gagged for 10 days.

"Sixth—Vacationists who start undressing to show you their suntan will be turned over immediately to the police.

"Seventh—Statistician fiends, who relate the height of the Tower of Pisa, the size of California redwoods, the cost of the Columbia River project, will be rounded up and put in a large field to fight it out among themselves.

"Eighth—Proverbial bores who tell of the number of blankets they slept under, the size of the fish they caught and the menus they had on their boat will have their travelling permits revoked and be forced to stay at home next summer.

No Visits by Proxy To Stockyards

"Ninth—Realistic descriptions of automobile factories at Detroit, of steel works in Pittsburgh, the stock yards at Chicago and the mechanical aspects of the Boulder Dam will make an offender eligible for a two-month sentence in a nut and bolt factory.

"Tenth—Anyone who remarks to a stay-at-home, 'You don't mean you didn't get out of town all summer!' will be turned over to me for my own private garden of hangings.

"Mrs. DeGoofey how soon do you expect to start your checkup of criminals? asked a police reporter.

"Within a few days," was the reply. "First, however, I intend to entertain the press and the members of the Do Something About It League at a reception tomorrow night at the league's headquarters."

"What are your entertainment plans, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a society reporter.

"I am going to show some movies I made of my recent Potomac cruise to Marshall Hall and return."

"Not home movies!" exclaimed the press.

"Yes—well, you see this was an unusual trip, and I feel that the shots I made will be very educational for those of you who had to remain at home."

Many Washingtonians Cancel European Trips

Unsettled Conditions Abroad Also Delay Return of Tourists; Mrs. W. A. Morgan And Mrs. M. B. Grosvenor Wait in France

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

A NUMBER OF WASHINGTON residents who planned late summer trips to Europe are wishing now that they either had gone earlier or charted their vacations in other directions. Sailing cancellations are becoming the rule rather than the exception these days when nobody seems to know from one hour to the next how the tide will turn and whether, if they manage to get across the Atlantic, they will ever get back again.

Up and down the corridors of the State Department these mornings, you can trail any number of prospective tourists who are trying to find out latest developments before they finish packing. Advice around there seems invariably to be "Don't go. There may not be war, but with negotiations still hanging fire, anything can happen."

So cancellations on this side continue; while Americans abroad are speeding up the date of their return as much as possible.

This hasn't been easy in the case of Mrs. William A. Morgan and Mrs. Melville Bell Grosvenor, who were expected to return to Washington this month and are being delayed indefinitely. Stopping over in Paris on their way home after a Mediterranean cruise and brief sojourns in Italy and Switzerland, they found their passage on a German liner had been canceled.

Hope to Return on Manhattan

For a while their prospects for getting back even in September were anything but bright, but now they hope to get reservations on the Manhattan, which sails September 22. Meanwhile, Dr. Morgan yesterday morning received a cablegram from his wife to the effect that she and Mrs. Grosvenor, along with other American tourists, have left Paris and are now with friends in a small town nearby.

Only a few American women are still in Warsaw, several having recently left for Stockholm and Oslo where they expect to remain indefinitely. Among those departing from the Polish capital this week was Mrs. C. Burke Elbrick, wife of the secretary of the American Embassy, who visited in Washington a few months ago with her husband. The Elbricks were stationed in Prague when Germany took over, so being shipped out of a country in time of Hitler stress is not entirely new to Mrs. Elbrick. Her husband is remaining on duty at the embassy in Warsaw. Others leaving Poland with Mrs. Elbrick were Mrs. William M. Camp, wife of the American Consul; Mrs. M. Williams Blake and Mrs. E Tomlin Bailey.

As yet Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle has made no plans to leave. Remaining with her and the American Ambassador are members of his staff and also Mrs. Biddle's daughter, Miss Boyce Thompson Schultz, and Miss Mary Mackenzie.

Aquitania Passages Canceled

When the Aquitania puts out to sea from New York (it was scheduled to sail today but has been held up), she will carry a number of notables, including the retiring British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay. But at least five Washingtonians who had booked passage won't be on board. Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Southwick and Mr. and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin and their daughter, Charmian, who had planned vacations in England and Scotland, have canceled their ship reservations. They hope to go over the middle of September or perhaps later.

Lady Lindsay, wife of Sir Ronald, is another who will not sail today on the Aquitania. She will remain at her Long Island home until later in the year.

Scheduled to leave Norway today are Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., and her children, who originally planned to sail September 6. Secretary Morgenthau already is on his way home and is expected to be back in Washington early next week.

Baron James Baeyens, Second Secretary of the French Embassy, and Baronne Baeyens who were to sail this week for a brief vacation in their homeland, have called off their trip.

Others around these parts, however, still have hopes of leaving for Europe soon. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Short have booked passage on the Normandie September 9 and are keeping their fingers crossed. And Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harkness, who haven't yet made reservations, are planning to go over some time in September, if war clouds clear.

Miss Ranneft will resume her studies at Holton Arms this year

Gen. Pershing Soon to Leave Walter Reed

Barring All Visitors, World War Leader Is Taking Rest Cure

Gen. Pershing, who has been recuperating at Walter Reed Hospital from a slight cold, has recovered and probably will leave the hospital within the next few days.

In the meantime the general is taking a complete rest. He not only is not permitting interviews with the press, but is not even seeing friends and former classmates for the moment.

The Carlton Hotel is holding the general's suite in readiness in case he should care to remain in Washington for awhile after leaving the hospital. His comfortable suite of two rooms on the first floor of the right wing of the main hospital building at Walter Reed is a magnet for everyone, but all visitors are barred.

Breaking a precedent, the American Legion has invited all the generals of the World War to attend its convention at Chicago, September 23 to 28, as its guests. It expects and hopes Gen. Pershing will be able to be there.

Dr. Castillo Najera Flies to Mexico To Join Family

Boarding a plane here last night the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, will arrive in Mexico City this morning to join his family.

Accompanied by Senora de Castillo Najera, their daughter, Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, and their three sons, Francisco, jr., Luis and Guillermo, the ambassador will return to Washington the middle of September.

Dr. Castillo Najera will be on hand when President Cardenas delivers his annual message to Congress Friday. Meanwhile Dr. Don Rafael Fuentes, Counselor of the Embassy is Charge d'Affaires, as the Minister Resident Counselor, Dr. Luis Quintanilla, also is away.

The Naval Attache of the Embassy, Commander Manuel Zermeno, arrived in Washington with his family from Mexico City on Monday night. The Zermenos have leased a house here for the season. They have three children.

Commander Zermeno arrived here three months ago to take over his new duties. Senora de Zermenos, however, remained in Mexico until the commander returned there recently.

Hostesses Irked No End; War Scare Causes Many an Empty Table at Capital Dinners

THAT EMPTY CHAIR at informal dinner parties in the Capital these end-of-summer nights is all because of the current crisis, when at the last-minute some diplomat, foreign or domestic, has to work late. Not since the early days of the New Deal, when hostesses got hardened to officials calling up at the last minute and saying they couldn't make it, has the atmosphere been quite so hectic.

The developments in Europe also are playing havoc with summer vacations. James Clement Dunn, political advisor to the State Department, had no sooner arrived in Bermuda than he turned right around and came back again. Since one of the big British ships which haul passengers between here and the island had been ordered back to London, Mr. Dunn returned by Clipper. His wife and younger daughter, Cynthia, are continuing their stay. Before leaving last week for Bermuda the whole family enjoyed a peaceful stay in Northeast Harbor, Me., and a trip to the World's Fair in New York.

MRS. EMORY S. LAND and Mrs. Basil Harris will be on hand tomorrow when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt smashes the customary bottle of champagne across the bow of the liner America in christening ceremonies at Newport News, Va. In ship-christening terminology, which somewhat resembles that of weddings, Mrs. Land and Mrs. Harris will serve as "matrons of honor" at the event, which means they will stand next to the First Lady clutching bouquets of flowers. Mrs. Land is wife of the chairman of the Maritime Commission, which built the ship, and Mrs. Harris is the wife of one of the vice presidents of the United States Lines, which will operate it. We also hear that Mrs. Creighton Peet, whose husband is secretary of the commission, will be in Newport News for the event, and will then return to Washington. She has been on Long Island for most of the summer.

A letter from Merritt Cootes, of our legation in Haiti, says that a stream of visiting American officials has kept members of the staff pretty busy recently. Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring stopped there on their way to Panama, and were rendered no end of honors by the Haitian government, and Senators Sherman Minton and D. Worth Clark dropped by last week. Merritt seems to have become a one-man chamber of commerce for Haiti and says that it's the ideal place to get away from the madding crowd, and not as hot in the summer as most people think. His mother, Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, was all set for a museum tour of Europe with Mrs. Nora Bell, formerly of this city, and they had planned to end up at the F. Lammot Belin place in the Jura Mountains, but their schemes have probably been knocked askew by this time.

NOW THAT thoughts are beginning to turn winter-wards, with the approach of cooler weather, officers of the Washington Ice Club are deep in plans for the coming skating season. Reports are that if plans for the club's second year go through, the membership list will be enlarged.

Late-season vacationists include Miss Rebecca Wellington, Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., and Cuthbert and Middleton Train. Miss Wellington, who has stuck it out here all summer battling with shorthand lessons, hopes to get away the middle of the month for several weeks at Beverly and Hamilton, on the Massachusetts North Shore. Mrs. Cumming is off on Friday to visit an aunt in Stockton, Calif., where her family has a large ranch. Cuthbert Train leaves on Friday by motor to spend Labor Day weekend in Canada, and his brother will visit Mr. and Mrs. Reverdy Wadsworth (Eleanor Roosevelt) at Geneseo, N. Y.

September is moving month, and several Capital residents will soon be in the throes of packing up. Robert Coe is giving up his house in Georgetown and will move out to Foxhall road. He has taken the home of Mrs. Ernest Angell, of New York, who, before her marriage last spring, was Mrs. Higgins Chapin.

C. W. Kniseley To Be Married

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Selbe, St. Albans, W. Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Irene, to Claude Wilson Kniseley, son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Kniseley, of Washington.

The bride-elect attended William and Mary College and Marshall College, receiving her bachelor of arts degree from the latter. Her graduate work was done at the University of Wisconsin and the University of California. For the last few years she has taught in Kanawha County, W. Va.

Mr. Kniseley attended the Georgia School of Technology and American University here. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity. He now is connected with the Riggs National Bank and is a member of the National University Society, the Juvenile Probation Committee of the District, the Junior Board of Commerce and the American Institute of Banking.

Yesterday afternoon the engagement was made known to friends of the bride-elect at a tea given by Mrs. Selbe in honor of two house guests, Miss Helen Williamson, of Washington, and Mrs. Herbert Jackson, of Portsmouth, Ohio. The wedding will take place at St. Albans, W. Va., in October.

Miss Betty Couzens Visits in Alexandria

Miss Betty Couzens, who motored here from her home in Detroit last week, is stopping with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bryant, jr., at their home in Alexandria.

Accompanying Miss Couzens on her trip here from Detroit was Miss Margaret Cotter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotter, of this city. Miss Cotter was the guest of Miss Couzens at her home of a month.

Yarnells Renew Old Friendships During Stay

Admiral and Mrs. Harry E. Yarnell are renewing old friendships during their stay in Washington, where the Admiral, who has been commander-in-chief of the Asiatic Fleet, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by President Roosevelt earlier in the week.

Last night Admiral and Mrs. Yarnell dined informally at a family party with Capt. Morton L. Deyo, United States Navy, and Mrs. Deyo at their home, 6534 Ridgewood avenue, Chevy Chase, Md. This evening they will be guests of Mrs. Stanley Thompson at dinner in her penthouse at 2400 Sixteenth street. Among those present will be the Netherlands Minister, Dr. Alexander Loudon, and Admiral and Mrs. John H. Towers. Also in the group will be Mrs. Thompson's houseguests, Mrs. Charles W. Atkinson and Mrs. Chandler Howard, both of Shanghai, China, who have been here since June.

Admiral and Mrs. Yarnell will leave early next week to visit the latter's mother, Mrs. Charles M. Thomas, at Newport, R. I. They will remain there for an indefinite period.

Dempseys Return For Brief Stay

Representative and Mrs. John J. Dempsey have returned to their apartment at the Shoreham for a brief stay, coming here directly from their home in Santa Fe, N. Mex.

They will go back to Santa Fe in time for the wedding of Representative Dempsey's daughter, Miss Muriel Dempsey, and David McNeill, which wil ltake place McNeill, which will take place

Lieut. Matheson To Fort Belvoir

Lieut. David Mason Matheson, graduated in June from the United States Military Academy, will report at Fort Belvoir, Va., in September, to be on duhy with the Corps of Engineers. He is in Washington with his parents, Col. and Mrs. John R. D. Matheson.

Lieut. Matheson recently was host to a group of friends at one of the weekly dances at the Army and Navy Country Club. Among his guests were Miss Barbara Henning, Mrs. Linette Arny Macan and Miss Evelyn Dupre Morris, of Alexandria; Thomas Harold Weaver, of Fort Belvoir, and Ernest Theodore Hiehle, of Washington.

Mr. Anamur to Go To Buenos Aires Instead of Tokyo

After making all preparations for his departure to Tokio, Japan, Resid Anamur, First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, has been notified of a change of orders at the last moment, and will be transferred to Buenos Aires instead.

Mr. Anamur is awaiting the arrival of his successor, Orhan Erol, before taking leave. It is believed Mr. Erol will arrive within a few days. If he does, Mr. Anamur will sail the first of next week for the Argentine to assume his new duties as counselor of the legation there.

Mrs. Bennett Back From Cape Cod

Mrs. Russell Bennett has returned to her residence on Bancroft place after a visit of several weeks with Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil, of Washington, at their summer home in Falmouth, Cape Cod.

Mrs. Bennett's daughter, Miss Florence Harris, has concluded a stay with Mrs. Henry Rowland and Miss Diana Rowland at their home at Witch Island, Me., and is visiting in New York before returning to the Capital for the winter.

Miss Edith Wright Visiting in Newport

Miss Edith S. Wright, who has been visiting Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould at her villa in Newport, is now the guest of Miss Joan Leidy there.

Miss Wright, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Cuba, and Mrs. J. Butler Wright, will be joined shortly by her parents. She will make her debut in Havana next winter and was presented to Newport society at a tea given last week by Mrs. Gould.

Mrs. and Miss Beard Entertain at Luncheon

Mrs. Rutland Duckett Beard and her daughter, Miss Renee Beard, entertained at luncheon yesterday at their home in Chevy Chase, Md.

After the luncheon some of the guests played bridge. They were Mrs. Ferguson Harrison, Mrs. H. D. Amiss and Mrs. John McGrew. Meanwhile the younger guests, including Miss Nancy Downes, Miss Jane Dunbar and Miss Kitty Woods, played tennis.

The Broughtons Visiting Here

Miss Helen Broughton, daughter of Mrs. Needham Broughton and the late Dr. Broughton, of Raleigh, N. C., and her mother are visiting Mrs. Broughton's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Burdon Manly Bell.

Miss Broughton, who has been here with her mother for about two weeks and will remain another week, will make her debut next year in Raleigh.

Count de Rochambeau At Wardman Park

Count and Countess G. de Rochambeau, of Paris, who are on a tour of this country, are at the Wardman Park Hotel during their stay in Washington.

Count de Rochambeau is a direct descendant of the United States Revolutionary general, Count Jean Baptiste de Rochambeau, who was in command of the French forces.

Arthur Dews Back From Bermuda Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Dew, who have been vacationing for the last two weeks in Bermuda, have returned to their home on Sudbury road, Colonial Village.

They stopped in New York en route home and visited the World Fair. They expect to be in town for the remainder of the season.

Returns From N. Y.

Miss Alicie G. Mirick has recently returned from Cooperstown, N. Y., where she has been spending the summer at Camp Fenimore on Lake Otsego.

Walcott, Jrs., On Honeymoon

On their wedding trip are Mr. and Mrs. William Walcott, jr., who were maried Friday. Following their honeymoon they will go to Lewisburg, W. Va., to make their home.

The bride, the former Miss Barbara Ann Caton, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Caton, of Alexandria, Va. Mr. Walcott is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William H. Walcott, also of Alexandria.

The ceremony took place in the garden of the bride's parents home at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, with the Rev. J. Jack Sharkey, assistant rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of Englewood, N. J., officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a frock of white net over satin. Her finger-tip-length veil was held in place by a band of white clematis. She carried a armful of white gladioli with clematis trailing over her filmy skirt.

The bride, who is a graduate of Wellesley College, had as her only attendant a classmate, Miss Margaret Butsch, of Buffalo, N. Y. Her gown of peach net was fashioned like that of the bride's. She carried a leghorn hat filled with peach gladioli and dark blue delphinium.

Oliver Walcott, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

A reception followed the ceremony and Mrs. Caton assisted the young couple in receiving, wearing a gown of blue lace. Her flowered toque was of a wine color. Mrs. Walcott had chosen a flowered chiffon frock and white picture hat for the occasion.

Mr. Wolcott is a graduate of the University of Virginia.

Senator Recuperating

Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, who was operated on in Walter Reed Hospital about two weeks ago, is progressing rapidly and will probably leave the hospital within the next four or five days.

Morrises Back In Alexandria

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Morris and their daughter, Miss Evelyn Dupre Morris, have returned to their home in Alexandria after a motor trip to Ocean Grove, Asbury Park, Atlantic City and other New Jersey resorts.

They also visited the World's Fair in New York. Accompanying them on their trip was Thomas Harold Weaver, son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Logan Mitchell Weaver, of Fort Belvoir, Va.

Before joining her parents on their trip, Miss Morris was a guest at one of the midsummer hops at the United States Military Academy. While at West Point Miss Morris was among guests at an informal supper at which Miss Fay Mohney and her parents, of Drexel Hill, Pa., entertained a number of cadets and their friends.

Mrs. Barnett To Return Today

Mrs. George Barnett, who has been spending some time at Narragansett Pier, R. I., is expected to return to her residence here on Rhode Island avenue today.

Mrs. Barnett has been at Narragansett since August 6.

Bolivian Envoy to Live In Mrs. Cloman's House

The Bolivian Minister and Senora de Gauchalla are expected to return the end of the month from Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., where they have been spending the summer, and will then move into the home of Mrs. Sidney Cloman, 2200 Kalorama road, which they have leased.

Mrs. Cloman, who has spent little time here in the last two years, now is in California.

Mrs. Ray Palmer Fetes Mrs. Gray

Mrs. W. Ashley Gray, of St. Louis, Mo., who is spending a few days in Washington, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Shoreham by Mrs. Ray Palmer.

Among the guests were Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, Mrs. Walter L. Campbell, and Mrs. Roy T. Davis.

Mrs. Palmer, who recently sold her house in Bethesda, Md., has taken an apartment at the Shoreham.

Emma Heck Makes Plans For Meeting

Schedules Events For Visitors to Geophysics and Geodesy Congress

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Luncheons, teas and sightseeing tours are being arranged for the entertainment of the women visitors coming to Washington next week in connection with the triennial Congress of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics. Miss Emma Hays Heck, sister of Comdr. Nicholas H. Heck, is chairman of the women's committee, assisted by Mrs. Lloyd V. Berkner. Capt. C. L. Garner heads the general committee in charge of entertainment for the congress delegates.

Headquarters for the women guests will be Strong Hall, women's residence on the campus of George Washington University, where the congress sessions will be held. Dean Vinnie Barrows is co-operating in plans to receive them. About 50 foreign women are expected to be here.

The first event will be a tea to be given next Thursday afternoon at Strong Hall for all of the out-of-town visitors in connection with the opening of the exhibition that the congress will stage in the new library of the university. Mrs. T. Wayland Vaughan is chairman of the committee for the tea, assisted by Mrs. Paul Whitney.

Luncheon Set For Friday

Friday a luncheon for the women will be given at Columbia Country Club, Mrs. Richard Field, of Princeton, N. J., wife of the president of the American Geophysical Union, presiding. The following week, informal teas will be arranged and sightseeing trips planned in the mornings.

One of the special events in honor of the foreign women is a tea for which the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase has issued invitations through its president, Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby. This will be at the clubhouse on Connecticut avenue Tuesday afternoon, September 12, at 4 o'clock, Mrs. Kerby and her board receiving.

Mrs. Edgar Fowler is chairman of the committee on arrangements, assisted by Mrs. J. H. Dellinger and Mrs. E. G. Zeis, of Miss Beck's committee; Mrs. George Winchester Stone, Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire, immediate past president of the club; Mrs. Campbell E. Waters, Mrs. George Finch, Mrs. F. F. Espenschied and Mrs. C. Dwight Curtiss.

All Sections To Be Represented

The international relations section of the club, of which Mrs. Fowler is chairmna, and which is now headed by Mrs. Lawrence O. Manley, is co-operating with the German section, Mrs. Leighton H. Peebles, chairman, and the French section, Mrs. James F. Price, chairman, in sponsoring the tea. It is their desire to give the foreign women an idea of women's club activities in this country, and the work of each section will be represented in the afternoon's program.

Assisting Miss Heck on the women's entertainment committee for the congress are Mrs. Field, Mrs. C. L. Garner, Mrs. L. O. Colbert, Mrs. Dellinger, Mrs. R. E. Gibson, Mrs. H. D. Harradon, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of the university; Mrs. William Bowie, Mrs. John A. Fleming, Miss Mary Lambert, Mrs. R. E. Weightman, Mrs. Zeis, Mrs. O. E. Meinzer, Mrs. A. G. Fielder, Mrs. P. R. Heyl, Mrs. C. S. Jarvis, Mrs. W. R. Gregg and Mrs. Frank Wenner, all of Washington.

Those from other cities include Mrs. E. T. Stetson, of Boston; Mrs. W. T. Thom, of Princeton; Mrs. C. O. Iselin, Woods Hole, Mass.; Mrs. Roger Revelle, of La Jolla, Calif.; Mrs. T. G. Thompson, of Seattle; Mrs. C. R. Longwell, of New Haven, and Mrs. Beno Gutenberg, of Pasadena.

The congress three years ago was held in Edinburg, Scotland. Miss Heck attended with her brother and many of the women chosen to assist on her committee were also present at that meeting.

Sadie Orr Dunbar Guest Of Dr. and Mrs. Lawson

Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, spent the last week-end as the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Huron W. Lawson at their summer home, Bear Den Lodge, above Bluemont, Va.

On Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., joined them for the day.

Mrs. Heber Votaw to Attend Wedding Of Niece in Columbus; Mrs. C. D. Lowe Back From New England Trip

MRS. HEBER VOTAW, president of the Chevy Chase Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, leaves today for Columbus, Ohio, to attend the wedding of her niece, Miss Mary Harding, who will be married there tomorrow to Philip Hoffman. Miss Harding, who is a niece of President Warren G. Harding, was graduated from Washington Missionary College, in Takoma Park, Md., in 1937. She spent the following year in California.

Mrs. Votaw expects to return from Ohio the last of next week.

MRS. C. D. LOWE, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, has returned fro ma trip to the New York World's Fair and to Norwich, N. H., on which she was accompanied by her son, Ralph, and her sister, Miss Frances Anderson. Miss Anderson, who is a teacher in the Greenville, S. C., schools, will return home Sunday.

Mrs. E. R. Seal, director of publicity for the congress, with her daughter, Nancy, recently returned from a motor trip to Illinois.

The office of the District organization, located in the N. E. A. Building on Sixteenth street, which has been closed during July and August, will open Friday and preparations will be under way next week for starting P.-T. A. activities with the beginning of the school term.

MRS. FREDERICK M. KERBY, new president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, with Mr. Kerby, is home after a month's vacation in Maine. They motored North and stopped on their return for a visit with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Kerby, in New York City. The former is on the staff of the Wall Street Journal.

MRS. F. W. FRANKE, retiring vice president of the Women's Overseas Service League for the Third Corps Area, has returned from a two months' trip on the Pacific Coast. She went to San Francisco in June to attend the convention of the league and was joined there by her husband, Col. Franke; their son, Charles, and Miss Ann Gray, who motored West. From California they went to Yosemite National Park, Portland, Seattle, Banff and Lake Louise.

Mrs. Franke is now preparing to attend the Women's Overseas Service League Day, to be sponsored September 9 at the New York World's Fair, by the New York unit.

IRENE WHITE, "Brownie" to the girls at Kamp Kahlert, of the Y. W. C. A., has gone to Hamilton, Ohio, to take a position as health education instructor in the "Y. W." there. She is a graduate of Oberlin College and has been counsellor in swimming and other water sports at Kahlert this season.

Mrs. Elizabeth Ketchum, executive secretary of the general education department here, is in Auburn, N. Y., for a week's visit and Clara Wheeler, of the health education department, is spending her vacation at her former home, Clifton Forge, Va.

Beta Sigma Phi Council To Meet Here Sept. 24

The D. C. Council of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority will be host to a meeting of the Eastern council to be held September 24, with headquarters at the Washington Hotel. Miss Irene Stevenson is general chairman of arrangements.

D. of A. Groups Are Active

Summer has not curtailed activities of the various councils of the District Daughters of America.

Last night, Betsy Ross Council gave a supper at the home of Mrs. Florence Whitney, 1352 Shepherd street, with the program following in charge of Mrs. Stella K. Graham. The regular deputies' meeting was held last night at 808 I street.

This evening, Loyalty Council will sponsor a locker shower followed by an entertainment, at the Northeast Masonic Temple, Eighth and F streets. Mrs. Clara Owens, chairman of the good of the order committee, will have charge, assisted by Mrs. Eunice Gettings, chairman of the entertainment committee.

The good of the order committee of Independent Council gave a supper party in Mechanics Hall, 808 I street, Monday night, preceding its regular business session. The proceeds went to the benevolent work of the council. Mrs. Clara Hinson, councilor, headed the committee on arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Mary Teague, chairman of the benevolent committee, and Mrs. Nellie Deane, chairman of the good of the order committee.

Mrs. Hannah Gates will be hostess tomorrow night at her home, 1713 Seventeenth street southeast, at a party being arranged by Mrs. Ida Beall, chairman of the State benevolent committee, for Golden Rule Council. Mrs. Beatrice Henderson, past councilor, will assist.

Jewish Relief Body To Discuss Plans

Plans for the annual donor luncheon of the Jewish Consumptives Relief Society, to be held the first week in November, will be discussed Wednesday at the first fall board meeting, announced for 2 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center. Mrs. Nathan Wallack, the new president, will preside.

The luncheon, which is to be at the Mayflower Hotel, will be the eighth given by the organization and will be in charge of Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn, past president, who has been appointed chairman of the committee on general arrangements. John J. Anthony, of the Goodwill Court of Mutual Broadcasting System, will be the guest speaker.

Mrs. Joseph Millenson will have charge of the books and tickets, and Mrs. Louis Dinowitz will again manage the rummage store. This has been conducted for the past six seasons and offers the members a means of earning their tickets for the affair. It is located at 1241 Seventh street and will be conducted for two months.

Relax in New England

Senator and Mrs. William Borah have arrived at the Poland Spring House, Poland Springs, Me., where they will remain until the middle of September.

Tea Honors Pax Romana Delegates

400 Attend Fete Given By Visitation Convent Alumnae Association

Miss Eleanor Connolly, president of the Georgetown Visitation Convent Alumnae Association, and other officers received yesterday afternoon at a tea given at the convent for delegates to the Pax Romana conference of the National Federation of Catholic Students.

Nearly 400 attended, representing 35 different countries, accompanied by the general secretary of Pax Romana, L'Abbe Gremand, and the auxiliary bishop of Paris, Henri-Roger Beaussart.

Among other distinguished members of the clergy who attended were Mgr. Maurealt, S. S., director of the University of Montreal; the Rev. William Black, O. P., head of the Newman Club in Scotland; the Rev. Martin D'Arcy, rector of Campion Hall, Oxford University; the Rev. Robert Boudet, from Parish Jecist, in Paris, and Dean Grattan, of Georgetown University.

Also in the group were Roger Millot and Mrs. Millot, of Paris, and Prof. Ives Simon, professor of philosophy at Notre Dame.

Tea was served in the play room where the school colors, yellow and white, were carried out in decorations of a long table at which officers of the association poured. A basket of flowers stood in the center and yellow candles burned in silver candelabra at either end.

Officers of the association in the receiving line included, in addition to Miss Connolly, Mrs. Agnes Fordney Jackson, of Saginaw, Mich.; Mrs. John Bennett, Mrs. H. Gabriel Murphy, Miss Agner Fealy, Miss Christabel Hill, Miss Helen Shea and Mrs. Lawrence Crawford.

Others assisting were Miss Jeanne Murphy, chairman of the Washington alumnae chapter; Miss Agatha Munhall, Miss Borredell Gower, Mrs. Frederick Stohlman, Miss Peggy Walsh, Miss Rose Marie Ward, Miss Mary Jane O'Donnell, Miss Petriva Jackson, Miss Betty Howard, Miss Carolyn Byrn, Miss Pauline Kolb, Miss Dorothy Johnston, and Miss Barbara Johnston.

Mrs. G. M. Kerr Heads Fete

Mrs. George Morrison Kerr, of Washington, national president of the Children of American Revolution, was in New York yesterday to preside at the program given on the second C. A. R. day observed at the World's Fair.

Robert DeShazo, junior president of the District, also was there, accompanied by the vice president, Graham Smallwood, and the past junior president, Bill Pennington, who is now chairman of the committee re-writing the by-laws for the District C. A. R.

Mrs. Carl Giroux, new State president of the organization, was unable to attend as she has just returned from Schenectady, N. Y., where she spent her vacation. She came here from Schenectady ten years ago. It was there that she started her work in both the D. A. R. and C. A. R. She was organizer of the Mohawk Society of the C. A. R. there and was its first senior president.

Miss Mary Hawes To Address Group Of Women Voters

Miss Mary Hawes will address the Foreign Policy Department of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters today at its fortnightly meeting at the home of Mrs. Lowell L. Leake, 102 West Woodbine street, Chevy Chase, Md. She will discuss "Crises and Cross-Currents in Central Europe."

Miss Hawes was in Czecho-Slovakia last year, at the time of the Munich pact, and she later visited Poland, Rumania, Hungary, Yugoslavia and England, interviewing political leaders in the various countries for a series of articles which appeared in The Post.

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz will report on "Union Now" by Clarence Streit and Mrs. Guy Faurote will review plans for an international federation.

A picnic lunch will precede the program which will begin at 1:30. The department will have one more meeting on September 6, before recessing until October 4.

Fire Fighters To See Melodrama

Officers and trustees of the International Association of Fire Fighters and their wives, will be in the audience tonight for the performance of the famous comedy melodrama, "The Still Alarm," at the Roadside Theater. The group, here for the annual board meeting, chose the play, glorifying the fire ladies of the '80's, as a feature of its entertainment program.

In the party, which includes some 30 fire fighters and their guests, will be the President of the association and Mrs. Fred W. Baer, of Kansas City, Mo.; the Secretary and Mrs. George Richardson; Trustees E. L. Carlin, of Pittsburgh; Capt. James M. Cody, of Halifax, Nova Scotia; Assistant Chief John J. O'Doherty, of Lorain, Ohio, and their wives.

The local branch of the fire fighters, headed by Capt. John L. Werheim, will be well represented. Guests of the association include Dr. David J. Price, of the Department of Agriculture, and Mrs. Price; Mrs. Ernest Howard, chairman of the police and fire committee of Columbia Heights; Miss Marion Haller, assistant clerk to the House District Committee; Miss Genevieve Sweeney, Mrs. Irene Brungart, Mrs. Harriet Jenkins and Miss Elizabeth Willett, all of the organization staff.

Bridges Urges Unpledged '40 Delegations

Republican Senator Advocates Freedom In Party Convention

By Felix Cotten.

Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, outspoken candidate for the Republican presidential nomination next year, yesterday insisted the various States should send unpledged delegations to the Republican National Convention.

"Owing to the importance of the coming presidential election and changing conditions and sentiment," he declared, "delegates should be unpledged, thus leaving the convention free to pick at the time the most logical candidate.

"The last four national conventions were cut and dried affairs. Delegates to the 1924 convention knew in advance Coolidge was to be nominated. The 1928 and 1932 conventions were Hoover conventions, and the 1936 was a Landon convention."

Wants Friendly Delegates

On a Western tour on which he will start soon, Bridges will urge that delegations be unpledged, but will "try to get on the delegations people friendly to me."

The New Hampshire Senator, noted for his vigorous attack on the Administration, outlined his itinerary. He will get the jump on all candidates, both Republican and Democratic, in the matter of a cross-continent speaking tour.

Bridges will formally launch his campaign at a Republican field day at Jacksonville, Ill., September 17. He will deliver about 40 speeches in 16 States in the succeeding two months.

Conferences Planned

He will confer with former President Hoover, Alfred M. Landon, 1936 Republican standard bearer, and Col. Frank Knox, Vice Presidential candidate in 1936.

"I am going to spread a little Republican doctrine," Bridges declared, "and try to pick up information as to how the people in the West feel about various questions."

Bridges' opposition to the Administration reciprocal trade agreement program was particularly bitter. He outlined a four-point reciprocal trade agreement platform plank, as follows:

A requirement that public hearings prior to drawing up trade treaties be held by the agency which negtioates the treaties.

Definite requirement that a list of articles involved in the negotiations be publicly announced.

Negotiation of treaties on a strict unilateral basis in contrast to the multilateral basis favored by Secretary of State Hull.

Charles P. Soper Dies Here at 88

Charles P. Soper, 88, former employe of St. Elizabeths Hospital, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital after a brief illness. He had worked as an oiler in the hospital's engine room for 36 years before his retirement 18 years ago.

A native of Maryland, he came to Washington as a young man. He served in the Navy for a period after the Civil War.

Mr. Soper leaves a daughter, Mrs. Frank Luckel, of 2247 Shannon street southeast, with whom he made his home, and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the home, with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Mattie Wright Funeral Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mattie M. Wright, for 22 years an employe of the Treasury Department, will be held at 2 p. m. today at her home, 1209 E street southeast, with burial in Congressional Cemetery. Mrs. Wright died Monday at her home after a long illness.

Mrs. Wright was in the public debt service of the Treasury Department. She leaves her husband, Charles T. Wright.

Photo-Engravers' Union Will Meet Here in 1940

The International Photo-Engravers' Union of North America will hold its 1940 convention in Washington next August, but no definite date has been fixed, it was announced yesterday. The president of the local union is Earle H. Harding, employed at the Government Printing Office. The estimated attendance at the convention would be 500.

Surety Official Hits Counselors As 'Exploiters'

Metropolitan Head Says Most of Them Are Fired Employes

By the Associated Press

Leroy Lincoln, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., testified yesterday that most insurance counselors are discharged employes of insurance companies who are engaged in "exploitation of policy holders."

Lincoln appeared before a Federal monopoly sub-committee after Morris H. Siegel, New York insurance counselor, had submitted a letter contending that Metropolitan, Prudential and John Hancock insurance companies had consistently tried to increase insurance in force, even when the practice was harmful to families of small income.

The Siegel letter was written in May, 1938, to Lincoln, Edward Duffield, president of the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, and Guy W. Cox, president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. It said the companies had been guilty of "vicious imposition on helpless people" in selling policies totaling $18,207 with annual premiums totaling $926 a year to one family of four. The family's income was only $35 a week, Siegel testified.

Said Fee Was $105

Siegel told the sub-committee that by readjusting the family's insurance, the policyholders' advisory council, of which he is a partner, had reduced the insurance to $12,000, had cut the premiums to a total of $245 a year and had obtained $689 in cash for the family. He said his firm's fee was $105.

Lincoln testified that Siegel had been employed by Metropolitan in 1931, adding that he did not know "whether he resigned or whether he was discharged, but if he resigned it was by request because of irregularities."

The witness added that he regarded the activities of insurance counselors as "an exploitation of policy holders" and "a malign influence on policyholders and on the honorable insurance agents of the country."

Mrs. Felix Cole Dead in Algiers

Mrs. Marilla Rathbun Cole, wife of Felix Cole, American Consul General at Algiers, died at Algiers Saturday, according to word received here yesterday. Mrs. Cole was the daughter of Mrs. Harold W. Cole, of Montclair, N. J. She married Felix Cole in 1928, when he was consul at Warsaw.

Besides her husband and her mother, Mrs. Cole leaves a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Meade, and a brother, John O. Cole, of Montclair, N. J.

Annenberg Tax Case Extended To Louisiana

Grand Jury Is Given Charges Linked to Racing Service Chief

By the United Press.

New Orleans, Aug. 29.—Widespread ramifications of the M. L. Annenberg racing news service tonight came to attention of the Federal grand jury investigating Louisiana's political scandals.

The jurors, summoned into special session, were given an income tax case connected with Annenberg, in addition to "other important matters," according to United States District Attorney Rene A. Viosca.

"We have received a report covering in full the first Louisiana offshoot of the Moe Annenberg case and our own case is now ready," the district attorney said before going before the jury. "It is an income tax case."

Viosca said he was not able to disclose whether the case concerned a gambler or politician or whether it is connected with the Louisiana State political upheaval. He also declined to say where the involved person or persons reside.

Meantime, it was revealed that one unit of a Nation-wide antitrust drive against building costs had started here. Federal grand jury action in New Orleans and other larger cities was expected to result later this year when evidence is assembled. Some Federal officials were represented as feeling the drive might be larger than either the Annenberg case or the Louisiana scandals.

Viosca, who predicted more than a year ago the Federal case concerning the Philadelphia publisher was certain to have local angles, was given the income tax case by agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau's special intelligence unit. Annenberg has been indicted in Chicago on Federal income tax charges.

For months, revenue agents have questioned owners of handbooks, their employes and others in this Southern gambling center. Thirty witnesses were subpenaed for questioning today and Thursday, but 18 gave statmeents to Federal agents.

Recently, for reasons which have not been fully explained, handbook operators here have worked more quietly than usual. In the winter season of Fair Ground track they do not operate at all. There is a law forbidding the books to function at any time.

Mrs. Rosa Norton To Be Buried in Arlington Saturday

Funeral services for Mrs. Rosa Norton, 79, a resident of this city since 1900, will be held at 11 a. m. Saturday, at Fort Myer chapel, with burial in the Confederate section of Arlington Cemetery. Mrs. Norton died Monday of a heart attack at Fort Bliss, Tex., where she had gone to visit relatives.

Mrs. Norton was the widow of the Rev. Jacob Anderson Norton, who was assistant chaplain for the Confederate Veterans of Washington. She shared in the work of her husband as pastor of several Baptist churches in nearby Virginia.

She leaves three daughters, Mrs. Golder Norton Kimmel, with whom she made her home at 4700 Connecticut avenue; Mrs. Charles C. Broy, wife of the United States Consul at Brussels, Belgium, and Mrs. John D. O'Leary, wife of Capt. O'Leary of the Marine Corps.

Julius G. Lay's Rites to Be Friday

Services for Julius G. Lay, former Minister to Uruguay, will be held at 10 a. m. Friday in St. Matthew's Church, on Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Mr. Lay died Monday in Massachusetts at the age of 67. He was a native of Washington, and had served in various consular posts and as Minister to Honduras before his appointment to Uruguay in 1934. He retired in 1937.

Maurice Costello, Ruth Reeves Wed

Tijuana, Mexico, Aug. 29 (AP).—Maurice Costello, veteran movie actor who gave his age as 54, and Ruth Reeves, 30, actress and daughter of Federal Judge Albert Reeves, of Kansas City, were married today.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

COLOSSAL "DANCE CAVALCADE!" Night spots are all a-buzz with talk of the big "Dance Cavalcade" due to be staged next month. There will be dance contests at a group of important spots, it's planned, the winners to finally stake a super-dance contest in the Griffith Stadium around the first of October. Won't that be something! The idea has been adopted from New York, where a similar chain of dance contests is said to have been highly successful. As we heard it, the Mayflower Lounge, Wardman's Metronome Room, the Hamilton's Rainbow Room, the Shoreham Blue Room and the Lotus will be the scenes of the preliminary contests. You'll probably be reading oodles of particulars about the "Cavalcade" within a few days.

Autograph Trouble. When Mayfair's Art Barker and Jole stopped by a Hot Shoppe late the other eve they were immediately surrounded by a flock of jitterbugs who insisted that Art was Glen Miller, wouldn't believe otherwise and were burned up when Art wouldn't autograph their menus with the Miller name.

MURIEL KRETZLOW, whose dancers are appearing at the Lotus, deserves the tag of "career woman." She literally raises her own dancers, taking them from the ranks of her Chicago dancing school, where they've been trained since they were little tykes of 6 or 8 years. Four groups of Kretzlow dancers are now on tour and one "line" will shortly open in Mexico City. Muriel has been dancing since she was 4 years old. In private life she's the wife of Newsman John Guyon.

Pete Macias isn't looking so happy entirely because Glen Miller's orchestra is making the Lounge Riviera their after-show headquarters. The Macias band has just been given a contract for another year at Riviera.

DIVING BARNEE. When a shower drove the Shoreham Terrace floor show into the shelter of the Blue Room on Monday eve, the resourceful Barnee substituted for high diving Capt. "Speedy" Phoenix. True, Barnee only dove off a chair but his technique was marvelous.

Chet de Chastain, of the Metronome Room, is mulling over a New York proposition for his band to make records for radio transcription. That's what he gets for building up the orchestra so smartly this summer.

BAMBOO BULLETIN. Al Norton's back and with a double portion of tan. He spent part of his vacation at Magothy Beach, then took his mother and young sisters, Florence and Madeline, up to the fair. Among Al's first greeters at Bamboo were those good pals, Sam Haines, or Indiana, and Bob Haynes, of Mississippi. It was a three-generation party since Bob was accompanied by his father, "Dad" Haynes, and pretty daughter, Barbara Ann.

Looking-Into-the-Future Department. Louis Williams' trio will play for dancing at Maryland Gardens in the late fall and winter season . . . The Raleigh's Pall Mall Room will open during the first week in October. Col. C. C. Schiffeler, manager of the Raleigh, hasn't made his mind up yet about the orchestra.

CARLTON PICTURE. Chic Mary de Sibour (minus hose) . . . Billy Briggs, Eastern Air Line executive. . . . George Riley, of the New Yorker Hotel . . . Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, very fetching in a late summer outfit.

Hour Glass' Arthur Todd is supposed to go to the St. Moritz in New York this fall. But it's our guess that he'll stay right at H. G., with an occasional excursion to the King Cole Room.

BRIGHT PROMOTION. As everyone knows, there's a radio in each of the Ambassador Hotel's 450 rooms. But twice a day all stations are cut out for a few minutes for a special broadcast from Jack Manning's "Strings of Romance" downstairs in the Hi Hat and an invitation for all guests to visit the Hi Hat.

Rainbow Room's Lew Berman, just back from Atlantic City, says that Beth Challis, of the Club Babette, is the finest singer they have in those parts.

AMOY, FISHERMEN! It's time for you to get in the running for the handsome Neptune Room Trophy to be awarded in November for the biggest fish boated in nearby waters. A perch, trout, bass, catfish or drum will qualify you to compete. All you have to do is enter your finny catch, have it measured and get an official entry form.

Brown Derby Tornado. Tex Ritter's Tornados (who've just finished an engagement at the Atlas Theater) did some fine tornado-ing around the Brown Derby the other eve, aided and abetted by Al and George.

Nancy Gay, who'll be at Glen Echo next week with Cecil Golly's (Music, by Golly!) orchestra

Dope Raiders Seize Woman and 3 Men

Three men and a woman, all colored, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday charged with violations of narcotic laws.

Mary Johnson, 20, of 900 block N street northwest, and Alphonso Feemster, 23, of 1100 block Fourth street northwest, were held to the grand jury and their bonds were set at $300 and $3,000, respectively. The cases of Jerry J. Cunningham, 40, of 600 block N street northwest, and William R. McAbee, 30, of 400 block Warner street northwest, were continued until September 13.

Detective Sergts. Robert Bryant and Carl Schamp arrested the four Monday and yesterday. Police said a quantity of heroin was confiscated.

Truck Kills Chevy Chase Boy Cyclist

Peter Herrmann Hit In Front of Home; Driver Held Reckless; Cars Hurt 3 Here

An 8-year-old Chevy Chase, Md., boy was mortally injured in front of his home yesterday, and in Washington three persons, two of them children, were hurt by automobiles.

PETER

Peter Herrmann died at Georgetown Hospital of a fracturd skull and brain injury at 3:30 p. m., four rode his bicycle down the driveway of his home, hours after he 4010 Leland street, Chevy Chase, into the path of a truck. His parents, Ferdinand and Helen M. Herrman, say the boy shortly before he died.

Police said Peter was knocked from his bicycle by a truck driven by John L. Cranford, of 14 Wessex road, Silver Spring, Md. The boy was given emergency treatment at his home by Pr. Benjamin C. Perry, of Bethesda, and was then taken to the hospital by the Bethesda rescue squad.

Officers Wilson Payne and Carroll Jones of the Montgomery County police charged Cranford with reckless driving and inadequate brakes. He posted $200 bond.

Peter was to enter the third grade at Rosemary School in Chevy Chase this fall, members of his family said.

Norman Wrotten, 3, of 318 Sixteenth street southeast, was knocked down by an automobile when he ran into the street from behind parked cars from an alley near his home. He was taken to Providence Hospital and was treated for multiple abrasions and possible brain concussion. His condition was believed not to be serious.

Driver Arrested

Police arrested Andrew W. Sotheron, 53, of 1504 Gale street northeast, driver of the automobile, and charged him with bad hand brakes.

Second 3-year-old traffic victim was Louis Pettis, 1244 Wisconsin avenue northwest. He was struck in front of his home and received a slight cut on his head. He received first aid at Georgetown Hospital. Police did not hold the driver.

P. N. Spurgeon, 64, of 455 E street northwest, was treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts on his left arm after he stumbled in front of a truck at Fifth and F streets northwest. Spurgeon told police he lost his balance and that the truck driver was not at fault.

Filly Didn't Run Where She Looked, Suit Charges

Mrs. David A. Buckley, jr., Virginia horsewoman and wife of David A Buckley, jr., local attorney, was charged yesterday with selling a cross-eyed horse, according to the Associated Press.

Glen N. W. McNaughton, attorney who once started a movement to offer Roosevelt $5,000,000 if he would resign, filed suit against Mrs. Buckley in the New York Supreme Court yesterday for $4,501. He claimed he bought a chestnut filly from her in 1937 for $1,600 and subsequently spent $2,901 trying to train the horse to run straight. Mrs. Buckley had assured him a white spot in the horse's eye was of no consequence, McNaughton said.

The horse could win no races, according to McNaughton, because it looks in one direction and runs in another.

At Buckley's office yesterday it was said that Mr. and Mrs. Buckley were in New York, and had made no comment.

Admiral Garst Dies at 91 From Fall Injuries

Rear Admiral Perry Garst, U. S. N., retired, who was aboard the Constitution on its final student training voyage in 1863, died last night at his home in Bradenton, Fla., of complications from injuries suffered in a fall, Associated Press reported. He was 91.

A native of Dayton, Ohio, Rear Admiral Garst saw service during the Civil War on the Marion during the summer of '64. He later returned to Annapolis, to be graduated from the Naval Academy in 1868.

He retired as rear admiral June 30, 1907. Following retirement, he lived many years in Washington before moving to Florida.

Rail Conductor For 40 Years Retires to Fish

Charles Morris Peters, veteran Baltimore & Ohio Railroad conductor, yesterday came with his train, the National Limited, into Union Station, his last terminus.

His last ride in nearly 40 unblemished years of railroading left the spry conductor emotionally torn between the love of what he was leaving—railroading—and the delights of what lay ahead for him—fishing.

He is now 69, a native West Virginian and will return there in retirement.

D. C. Begins Travel-Habit Survey Today

40,000 to Get Queries on Going To and From Work

Government employes and some 40,000 privately employed persons today will begin to receive questionnaires asking 18 questions about their travel habits in going to and from work.

The District highway department, in co-operation with the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, yesterday started distribution of the questionnaires prepared by the Public Roads Administration. They will be mailed to all Government employes working in Washington and to 40,000 employed outside the Government but in the downtown congested area.

When the survey is finally completed, according to Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, many of the problems of traffic congestion during the rush periods may be solved or alleviated.

No Signatures Required

The data, if furnished by the employes as requested, will give the investigators a record of the comings and goings of most of Washington's wage earners, but the record will be anonymous and statistical rather than personal as no signatures are required on the questionnaires.

Once the information is obtained, Capt. Whitehurst said, the highway department will proceed with other phases of the general survey that will become the basis for long-range highway and traffic planning.

In one of these subsequent studies the investigators will try to establish balances between transportation demands generated by concentration of governmental and business activities in downtown Washington and the transportation facilities needed to serve them, Whitehurst said.

Expansion Will Be Considered

"The effect on street traffic of such outlying centers of employment as the Navy Yard's shops will be examined," he said, "also the influence of the city's recreational, educational and market centers.

"The expansion of Washington's residential areas and the directional trend of this movement will be carefully considered in their relation to highway or street facilities."

The studies are being directed by L. M. Hedgcock, highway project engineer for the District, and F. W. Lovejoy, of the Public Roads Administration. S. R. Harrison, highway department engineer, has been assigned to full-time work on the project, and will be assisted by William D. Heath, of the municipal garage, and John H. Hitton, of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Capital News In Brief

Fireplace Backfires

Because of the cool weather, three women living at 1538 Forty-fourth street northwest started a blaze in the fireplace last night.

The smoke, instead of going up the chimney spread through the house, so that the occupants were forced to call for fire department assistance. Firemen removed the fire in shovels.

The women, Miss Josephine B. Timberlake, Miss Betty C. Wright and Mrs. Laura Stovel, found that starting the fire left them colder than before, since all the windows had to be opened to let the smoke escape.

War Hero Honored

C. M. Jones, of 2039 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was awarded the silver star by the War Department yesterday for gallantry in action in France in 1918.

Jones was a first lieutenant of the Twenty-sixth Infantry, First Division, American Expeditionary Force, and he was cited for bringing a wounded member of his patrol back to the lines under heavy gunfire. The incident occurred during the occupation of Bouconville.

Randolph Visits Capitol

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday was at the Capitol for a few hours en route to Miami, where today he will address the national convention of Jewish war veterans.

D. C. Appeals Court Sets New Rules

System Changed For Reviewing Acts Of Administrative Federal Agencies

A new system for reviewing the acts of administrative agencies will be placed in operation Friday by the District Court of Appeals.

Among agencies to be affected are the Board of Tax Appeals, the District Board of Tax Appeals, the Processing Tax Board of Review and the Federal Communications Commission. Specific rules were adopted for these units; all others were covered by one general set of rules.

The new system was designed to bring the practice of the Court of Appeals into harmony with the system of civil procedure promulgated last year for all Federal courts.

20 Days for FCC Appeals

The court ordered that appeals from FCC decisions be filed within 20 days after effective date of decisions and gave the FCC 30 days after an appeal is filed to present the records of the case. Should the commission fail to include matter believed by the complaining party to be important, it was provided that the party might remedy the omission or request the court to do so.

The court cautioned lawyers to confine FCC apeals to disputed points, giving as an example the proper procedure in an appeal involving the financial standing of an applicant for a radio license. "Matter relating to station interference, or to the type of daily programs," said the court, "would not be ssential to the question involved, and should be omitted."

The court in past opinions has thrust aside ponderous records and arguments when it found these to be on points not directly at issue before it.

Cost of Appeals Reduced

The old rule of sending a "mandate" to the FCC after the court acts in a case will be abolished. Instead, the FCC will receive a simple certified copy of the court's opinion and judgment order.

The general rule for appeals from administrative bodies ordered such cases placed on the court's special calendar. The court acted to preserve the rights of persons who wished to intervene in such cases but were not given by law the right to do so. Such interveners were ordered permitted to present their positions within 10 days after the filing of the appeal in which they were interested.

To save the appellate justices from having to read complete records, when cases before them involve only part of a record, it was provided that disputing parties may designate what part of a record shall be printed for study by the court. This was expected to reduce the expense of appeals.

Infantile Paralysis Cases in D. C. Below Average

With less than three weeks to go before the danger is over, Washington has coasted through the annual infantile paralysis period with only five cases to date, half of the usual number, it was learned from the District Health Department last night.

One of the cases, it was reported, was listed here but is a victim in Virginia. Three cases are in close proximity in southwest Washington, the fifth case in the northwest section. There have been no fatalities.

According to Assistant Health Officer Dr. James G. Cumming, the city had nine cases and two deaths by this time last year, and has from 10 to 15 cases by this time as an average, with two or three fatalities. The season of the disease's prevalence, he said, begins in late spring and continues throughout the summer. Seldom is a case reported after September 15.

Boundary Issue Confronts U. S. In Antarctica

Expedition Hopes Little America Can Be Found—or Dug Up

While peace continued to hang by a nervous thread in Europe, the United States yesterday was having boundary problems, too.

Some of its officials were wondering whether Little America should be moved or left where it is—even if that's on British territory.

The State Department, evidently shunning a possible free-city-and-corridor situation, was said to favor moving the little town (?) to a part of the Antarctic not claimed by England.

U. S. Antarctic Service, agency through which preparations for this country's first official expedition to the down-under land are being made, said the final decision might have to wait until Admiral Byrd and his men get there.

"We intend to have two bases this time. One will be on land we claim," an official said. "We've never recognized England's claim to the Ross Dependency, where Little America is, but then we have not denied recognition, either. The weather probably will have the last word about where we'll go."

That it might be easier to "surrender" Little America than to dig it out and move it was one opinion expressed—although it was hoped radio towers and base huts left two years ago would be found in usable condition.

The Bureau of Fisheries yesterday assigned Milton Lobell to the expedition to study whales. Lobell has been assigned to North Atlantic fisheries.

$75,000,000 Saving Credited to PWA

Col. E. W. Clark, acting commissioner of public works, reported today that PWA investigations had saved the Government more than $75,000,000.

Clark said supervision not only saved public funds, but also "eliminated to a high degree bad construction practices such as collusive bidding, closed specifications, the 'kick-back' and wage underpayments."

WPA Gang Strikes 'Oil' Here, Works 'Gusher' for Six Weeks

One Jailed for Theft of 900 Gallons of Gasoline From Line Tapped While Digging Sewer; Other Beneficiaries Rounded Up

A WPA sewer gang struck "oil" in Southeast Washington and worked the "gusher" secretly for more than six weeks, it was revealed last night.

The "gusher" was capped yesterday by police, who discovered a 20-foot shaft leading directly to a Standard Oil Co. gasoline pipeline which, when firmly tapped with a pick, produced a gusher of refined oil—commercial gasoline.

The pipeline was discovered by workmen when a sewer project was being dug on Potomac avenue southwest, between Half and Capitol streets. Three Standard Co. pipelines, extending from a pier at the foot of South Capitol street to tanks at South Capitol and I streets, cross the sewer at Potomac street. It was at this point that oil—or more precisely, gasoline—was struck.

According to a story allegedly related to police by Henry Speaks, 23, colored, of the 1200 block of Half-street southeast, the workers ran into the pipelines a month and a half ago and decided to tap one of them.

The tapped line, the WPA workers found, carried gasoline and that they could run their automobiles with it. It worked so well, Speaks admitted, according to police, that he sold the tapped gasoline to cab drivers at cut prices.

A twist of fate, however, ended the business enterprise and caused the arrest of Speaks, who for technical reasons, was charged with housebreaking.

A Standard Oil tanker, unloading a few days ago, had to clear its hold of water before it could begin pumping its gasoline into the storage tanks. The water was run off through the regular gasoline line and Speaks unwittingly tapped the water and sold it for gas. An irate cab driver tipped off Private W. W. Knox, of Fourth Precinct Station, who uncovered the scheme and arrested Speaks.

Speaks, Knox said, confessed to stealing and selling 900 gallons of gasoline. Speaks said he was not a WPA worker but had learned of the pipeline from the sewer crew. Last night police were rounding up WPA workers who had benefited in the "oil" strike.

Gates Farm Sold

The farm of Clarence J. Gates, near Redland, Md., containing 180 acres, was sold at trustees' sale yesterday to the Farmers' Banking & Trust Co. of Rockville, the only bidder, for $8,000.

Greenbelters Ask Exemption From Hatch Law

Residents of Greenbelt, Md., will be urged to sign a petition today asking Attorney General Frank Murphy for a ruling exempting them from the operation of the Hatch act.

The petition was drawn up and signed last night at a meeting of the Maryland Democrats of the Twenty-first District in the social room of the schoolhouse at Greenbelt. It states that about 80 per cent of employed residents are Federal workers, and claims that to bar them from "strictly nonpartisan" local elections would be "an infringement upon civil liberties."

Dr. Wight Heads U. S. Veterinarians

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Dr. A. E. Wight, of Washington, D. C., chief of the tuberculosis eradication division of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture, late today was elected president of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

He will take office at the 1940 convention in Washington next August.

Simultaneously it was announced that Dr. John R. Mohler, of Washington, D. C., chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, had been awarded the twelfth international veterinary congress prize—highest honor the veterinary profession can bestow. It was awarded in recognition of his "distinguished achievements in veterinary service in the United States and foreign countries."

Storm Increasing Off Atlantic City

A special Weather Bureau warning last night said a disturbance off the Middle Atlantic Coast has increased in intensity and is centered 150 miles southeast of Atlantic City and moving slowly northeastward.

The storm is attended by shifting winds and gales over a wide area and probably will pass a short distance south of Nantucket within 24 hours.

Fair skies and somewhat warmer temperatures were forecast for Washington, however. Yesterday's highest recording was 77 degrees at 1 p. m.

Officer to Retire

The District Commissioners yesterday approved the application of Capt. John M. D. McCubbin, 57, of the White House police force, for retirement on September 1 because of physical disability after 30 years' service. The retirement was first approved by the Treasury administrative board.

D. C. Realty Value Hits 6-Year High

New Buildings and Additions in 1939 Are Estimated At $39,661,300

The value of new buildings placed on the District tax rolls last fiscal year was estimated at $39,661,300 yesterday by Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen in his annual report to the Commissioners. These brought the realty assessments to the highest point since 1933.

Realty taxes levied in the year ending June 30 amounted to $20,886,491, as compared with $20,498,552 in 1938 and $20,899,117 in 1933, the record year.

The Northwest section got the greatest share of the new buildings, Allen's report showed. Its improvements were valued at $16,863,400; those in the Northeast and Georgetown at $13,873,300; Northeast and Southeast county at $7,414,100; Southeast city at $1,325,900, and Southwest city at $184,600.

Total Is $1,193,499,086

Total realty assessments were $1,193,499,086 of which $480,473,718 was for land and $713,025,368 was for improvements.

Assessor Allen asked the Commissioners to renew their recommendation to Congress that the District be given a gift tax to supplement the inheritance levy. The tax proposal was considered by the last Congress but was not reported out of committee.

"The gift tax would impose the same tax upon the distribution of estates prior to death as would be imposed if such property were distributed by testamentary dispositions," Allen said, "or, to use a colloquialism, it would plug up a hole in the present inheritance tax law."

Reports on Other Levies

Making his last report on the intangible personal property, which was repealed in the 1939 District revenue act, Allen stated that it produced $2,669,145.95.

The business privilege tax, which expired June 30, returned only $1,696,955.35 after deductions for tangible tax, etc., and of this amount $583,980.40 was uncollected as the fiscal year ended.

The comparatively new inheritance and estate taxes produced $430,641, Allen said, or an average tax of $541.64 for each of 839 estates.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Nine tons of football players are awaiting the opening toot of the referee's whistle tomorrow night at Soldier Field. They are the 71 college All-Americans under the command of Elmer Layden, and the 41 professionals at the beck of Steve Owens, coach of the New York Giants. The winner? Wanna bet?

POVICH

We'll take the pros. We think the Giants are going to whale the tar out of the collegians tomorrow evening, despite the fact that the college boys are the betting favorites as we go to press. And despite the fact also that the standing in the previous five annual All-Star-pro games stand: Victories—Collegians, 2; Pros, 1. Ties, two.

Chicago is properly excited about the sixth All-Star game sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. Eighty thousand fans will fill Soldier Field to the gunnels. Football coaches from coast to coast have descended on the town for the game and the gazettes are teeming with pictures of Davey O'Brien, Sid Luckman, Howie Weiss and the big, bad pros from New York. Cincinnati and New York can gloat about their baseball clubs. Chicago is in a football dither.

Redskin Beating Boosted All-Stars

The collegians have gained new respect in these All-Star games since their 28-16 defeat of the Washington Redskins last August. The Redskins, like the current New York Giants, were professional football's champions, and they were licked to a frazzle by the college boys. But we still think the collegians are false favorites.

Last year the collegians didn't lick much of a football team when they beat the Redskins. The Washington club was not, actually, the same team that won the pro championship the season before. In the first place, a conspicuously absent figure in the Washington backfield was Cliff Battles, who could play considerable football. And Sammy Baugh, the Redskins' chief scoring threat, was attempting to play on one leg as a consequence of an injury received in practice.

Riley Smith was hurt in the first period of the game an hauled away to the hospital for an operation. The Redskins weren't in shape. They were tuckered by five weeks of practice in the blazing sun of Virginia, a horriole training mistake that no coach would make twice. The Redskins were fair game for any sort of a football team, yet they scored two touchdowns against the All-Americans.

Giants Hard as Nails for Battle

The collegians this year will be meeting a different sort of football team. The New York Giants will come out of northwest Wisconsin, hardened by three weeks of practice in the cool of the North woods. And they have their regular lineup intact, plus a few choice acquisitions from 1938 college ranks.

Last year's college outfit was supposed to be the finest squad college coaches had placed on the field, yet the collegians were helpless to gain through the Redskins' line, poor as it proved to be in the pro league. The Giants' line will be better. It should remove the threat of a college running attack and enable the pros to concentrate on pass defense.

The talk here is of Davey O'Brien, but the pros are greatly unworried by the presence of the little Texan. "Too small," was the succinct remark of one professional coach today. "O'Brien isn't big enough to throw with any accuracy against the Giants' big ends who will be rushing him. He's no Sammy Baugh. Sammy had the height which is invaluable to a passer."

Luckman May Steal Davey's Thunder

The suspicion is that Sid Luckman, who last year was described as "Columbia's 1938 football team," will get the chief passing assignment in the Collegians' backfield tomorrow night. "He's almost as good a passer as O'Brien and he's more deceptive," admitted an Eastern college coach. "Luckman can run that ball, too, if he's hemmed in."

It's no comfort to the Collegians either that Marshall Goldberg, perhaps the best running back in 1938 college football, is suffering from an injured foot. Goldberg broke a small bone in his foot at a boys camp during the summer and his new employers, the Chicago Bears, have asked him not to extend himself in preseason games. Bill Osmansky, of Holy Cross; Howie Weiss, of Wisconsin, and Vic Bottari, of California will get the important tail-back jobs for the Collegians.

It will be a test not particularly of college football vs. pro football but of Notre Dame football versus the pros. Because hte Collegians this year are in the hands of Elmer Layden, Irish coach, who has installed the Notre Dame system of play, with its balanced line and its T-formation in the backfield.

Pros Frown on Notre Dame Style

Curiously enough the Notre Dame style of football is not held in particularly high regard by the pro coaches. None of the pro teams use it. Every team in the league operates from the unbalanced line as distinguished from three men on each side of the center, and none of them use the indirect pass from center as featured by Notre Dame.

The most romantic figure on the field tomorrow night may not be Davy O'Brien or Sid Luckman, but a big six-foot-three 220 pounder named Ken Strong. He's back with the Giants after being on the pro league blacklist for nearly six years because he chose to take his talents to an outlaw league which would pay him more money. The league folded and big Ken has been reinstated. From Ed Danowski, Ward Cuff and Tuffy Leemans he'll get plenty of blocking on the wide end sweeps for which he is famous. He graduated from college ten years ago, has been playing pro football ever since, and tomorrow night may prove that experience never hurt anybody.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 29.—The pity of it all is that Europe doesn't care whether Joe DiMaggio hits .400 this year, or gets farmed out to Binghampton. It isn't even concerned over the ability of Joe Louis to play 20 rounds of squat tag with Robert Pastor. There hasn't been a single gloat in the controlled foreign blats to the effect that the Dodgers are leading the Giants or that Johnstown has developed into a whisky tenor. Europe could even take with utter equanamity, an announcement that Maxie Rosenbloom was returning to the ring to fight Jack Doyle.

CONSIDINE

Not a single European sports journalist will sit down to write a piece on Walter Hagen's retirement. Nobody from Marseilles to Moscow will work up the faintest choler over the fact that Walter Pate replaced the veteran Gene Mako on the American Davis Cup team with 18-year-old Jack Kramer who lost in the first round of the national singles last year, while Mako went all the way to the runner-up berth. As yet no European paper has tried to buy the serial rights to "How to Box," by Billy Conn.

Have They Heard of the Recall of Dickshot?

Have the foreign offices heard the big news about the recall of John Dickshot by the Giants? Can it be that they aren't excited over the $150,000 libel suit which Natie Brown has tossed at a Washington sports announcer for allegedly asserting that he took a dive for Galento? Was Daladier pleased when Jack Dempsey named Georges Carpentier as owner of the hardest right-hand punch of them all?

There's no telling how the Soviet stands on Red Ruffing's proposal to ask $1,000 next year for every game he wins this season. Might be interesting to take a poll of the Storm Troopers and Elite Guard to find just where they stand on one vital fighting question? Is Apostoli or Hostak the middleweight champ?

Europe Should Warn McKechnie

Unless Europe soon takes a definite stand on sending an ultimatum to Bill McKechnie, insisting that he not start Bucky Walters, a fastball pitcher, against the fast-ball-hitting Yankees in the World Series we'll begin to believe that it considers this sort of crisis beneath the attention of civilized men. From Gibraltar to Gdynia there isn't a single Arch Macdonald to spread the clarion warning that there are ducks upon the pond. Say, that's great about Gabby Hartnett being on the verge of breaking Ray Schalk's mark of catching 1,722 games, isn't it Il Duce? Whassat? Oh . . .

If Europe has any grave concern over the coming of the four-minute mile, it is showing a nice restraint. I know Germany has a reserve and standing army of 4,000,000 and that Italy has more, but what are their prospects for the Olympic hop-skip-and-jump? Will they be properly armed, when the Finnish brass hat yells "All out for the 100-meter dash?" Is the call for the high jump, the Marathon and the 1,500 meter going to find them contemptuously unprepared?

We're afraid it is. We're afraid that none of these things matter to them, and that they think we are dopes for permitting them to matter to us, who live in peace.

The dopes!

Tigers' Rally In 9th Beats Champions

Gehringer's Double And Higgins' Single Sends Winning Run Across for Detroit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 29.—The Tigers blew a five-run lead in the first half of the ninth inning today, but came back with a run in their half to nip the New York Yankees, 7 to 6, and end the world champions' ten-game winning streak.

DONALD

With Fireman Johnny Murphy on the mound, after Atley Donald and Spud Chandler had taken a walk to the showers, Charley Gehringer doubled and Pinky Higgins also doubled to send the deciding run across, and hand the Yanks their first setback on the current Western invasion.

This nullified a five-run spree the Yanks put on in their ninth-frame batting chance, in which they clubbed Buck Newsom for half a dozen hits, topping it off with Joe DiMaggio's twenty-third homer of the year with two aboard. Afterward, Archie McKain took over, got Jake Powell for the third out, and received credit for the victory.

Until the ninth started, the Tigers looked like a shoo-in to take the ball game. They had scored two runs off Atley Donald in the first inning on Charley Gehringer's fourteenth homer of the year, with a man on base. They added two more in the third on two hits and an error, and boosted their total by one tally in the sixth and another, at the expense of Chandler, in the eighth.

The Yanks opened the ninth with consecutive singles by Joe Gordon and Babe Dahlgren. Buddy Rosar's pinch-fly scored Gordon. Then Frankie Crosetti and Red Wolfe singled in order to send another run across. After Charley Keller forced Rolfe, DiMaggio drove his payoff shot into the lower deck in leftfield.

Bees Beat Cards, 2-1; Now 5½ Games Behind

Boston's Third Victory of 4-Game Series; St. Louis Now Only Two Games Ahead of Onrushing Cubs; Other N. L. Clubs Idle

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 29.—The day's only National League game saw the Boston Bees inflict another damaging blow today to the St. Louis Cardinals' sagging pennant hopes, Casey Stengel's team taking the last game of the series, 2 to 1.

It was the Bees' third victory of the four-game set, and it not only dropped the Cards five and a half games behind the league-leading Cincinnati Reds but also placed them only two games ahead of the onrushing third place Chicago Cubs.

STENGEL

The Bees, who themselves are going nowhere in particular, sent young Dick Errickson to the firing line in his second start of the season, and he held the St. Louisans to eight scattred hits.

His teammates started off with a rush in a first inning that promised much better things than the one run that materialized. With one out, Hassett and Simmons singled on the first balls pitched to them, and Tony Cuccinello followed suit to drive in "the singing thrush." West walked to fill the bases, but Simmons strolled off third base and was run down. Majeski walked to fill the bases again, but Lopez lined out to Terry Moore.

The Cards tied it up in the third when Bob Weiland, who later was relieved on the mound by Bob Bowman, opened with a single, was sacrificed to second, took third on

Nine Terrapin Gridders Drop From Squad

The University of Maryland's football squad, not due to report for the first practice until Tuesday, already has dwindled from an expected 50 to 41, it was announced yesterday. Some of the gridders have been laid low by scholastic deficiencies and others have been eliminated by Coach Frank Dobson as "not having the urge to play the game."

Maryland is resurfacing its quarter-mile running track in Byrd Stadium and it is expected to be considerably smoother and faster by next track season. Joe Dexlin, letter-winning halfback on the Maryland eleven last year and a consistent point scorer as a hurdler on the track team, is now enrolled as a plebe at West Point.

Ted Williams' Homer Beats Indians, 7 to 4

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 29.—Another Cleveland pitcher learned today that Ted Williams is a dangerous batter. The Boston rookie outfielder lined a home run off Pitcher Harry Eisenstat with the bases jammed to give the Red Sox a 7-to-4 decision over the Indians.

Williams hit one of Mel Harder's pitches yesterday for a circuit blow with two mates on base to win that game, 6-5.

The homers gave Boston a split in the four-game series. Today's provided Wilfred Lefebvre, rookie southpaw up from Holy Cross College, with his first American League decision of the campaign. He needed the relief help of Joe Heving.

Williams' smash today—his twenty-first this year—climaxed a Boston fifth-inning rally which produced six runs.

Government Net Finals Today

A new set of doubles champions will be crowned today in the Government tennis tournament when top-seeded Al Smith and Albert Ritzenberg come to grips with second-seeded Sam Hayes and Ray Stocklinski on the Potomac Park courts at 3:30 p. m.

Smith, the surprise package of the tourney, will do much to hoist the No. 1 duo to a favorite position if his hot play of previous matches continues. He has almost single-handedly captured the team trophy for Department of Agriculture, which entered nine players.

Squad Cutting Is Major Worry of Redskins' Flaherty

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Los Angeles, Aug. 29.—The question of who will be the six Redskins to "bite the dust" when six men are dropped from the 1939 squad Monday after the Skins' game with the Los Angeles Bulldogs, furnished an additional headache today for Coach Ray Flaherty because of the performances of George Karamatic and Tillie Manton in last night's battle with the Pacific Coast All-Stars.

Karamatic and Manton had been regarded as marked men by Flaherty, but their prominent part in the 20-to-7 victory over the All-Stars in San Francisco set Flaherty off on a new trend of thought.

While the Skins' batch of rookie hopefuls were making anything but an impressive showing, Karamatic put on an encouraging display of all-around ability and scored one of the Skins' three touchdowns. Manton was equally as impressive with a storybook catch of a pass from Sammy Baugh and a 13-yard drive through the All-Stars' center that put the Skins within 1 yard of a score.

Still showing their lack of familiarity with this year's crop of new plays, the Skins' stumbling, blundering attack last night was not improved by the presence of the rookies. Wilbur Moore, of Minnesota, and Steve Slivinski, of Washington, both of whom were expected to do great things for the Skins this fall, failed to make an impression.

Snoring Rife At 115-Inning Softball Game

D. C. Lads Set Record In Roosevelt Stadium; Details Hard to Get

By Al Hailey

It was in the ninety-ninth inning when uncouth snoring noises from the outfield unnerved the pitchers and almost disrupted the daffy proceedings yesterday at Roosevelt Stadium which set a new high in something—nobody is quite certain what.

The daffiness consisted of marathon softball—115 innings of it—as demonstrated by a score of lads who may grow up to be Congressmen, or something equally harmless.

Until the ninety-ninth inning, however, things had proceeded on an even keel. But from that point all was confusion. A panorama of the stadium diamond disclosed a bleary-eyed lot of youngsters who, in the far reaches of the field, insisted on prone positions.

The apparent comfort of these fellows—the outfielders—proved disconcerting to the pitchers—hardest working of all the contestants, and the situation was growing tense until a plan whereby a pitcher only hurled two innings before swapping positions with an outfielder was culminated.

Interviews Discouraging

Interviews with the contestants proved discouraging. Your correspondent did not get to the game until the ninety-seventh inning, and by that time everybody was asleep.

As a matter of fact, your correspondent was half-asleep, but, determined to learn what was going on, would not give up.

It was learned on high authority that the contestants were from the Roosevelt Boys Club and the Johnson-Powell Playground. Furthermore, it was discovered that the fellows started playing at 5:23 a. m., frisky and cheery, as you please.

Finally, it was learned that Johnson-Powell put on a stirring rally in the 115th inning and won the game, 111 to 101. This was learned, however, only after your correspondent decided to follow the outfield's example and slept through what happened after the 101st inning.

There was enough time, however, to interview the contestants, but it's just as well to forget that.

Greiner's 66 Snaps Mark At Five Farms

Overton, Caldwell And Spencer Also Qualify; Greiner Has 142, Brownell 148

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Aug. 29.—Washington's hopes in the forty-third national amateur championship in Chicago will rest on the slim golfing shoulders of Bobby Brownell because the Manor Club collegian was the lone qualifier from the District in the Middle Atlantic sectional qualifying rounds here today over the Five Farms course.

While Brownell was qualifying easily with the second best score of the day, a pair of morning 38s and two afternoon 38s, the U. S. G. A. medal went to the host city's great young shotmaker, Otto Greiner, who

'Freeze Up Artist' Added to Police Benefit Show

While the District's law enforcers toil and work up more perspiration than they have in months, at least one individual will keep "cool" at the field day for the Metropolitan Police Retiring Association at Griffith Stadium on Labor Day.

The chilly individual will be Tex Hammack, an expert at the art of freezing himself in a cake of ice, whom Lieut. John Agnew added to his list of entertainers yesterday. Hammack will be sealed in an icy coffin and attempt to shatter the world time mark of 45 minutes for the feat. The longest he has previously stayed frozen was 40 minutes, Hammack says.

Postponed Midget Races on Tonight

The midget auto races scheduled for the Capitol Speedway last night will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock when Paul Russo, 1938 midget racing champion, returns to set a hot pace over the one-fifth mile oval at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast.

Light rains yesterday necessitated the postponement when the track threatened to become too slippery for the speeding iron jitterbugs. A field of 18 starters is expected, and a special "grudge" race will be driven by "Cowboy" O'Rourke, outboard pilot, and Red Redmond, who will drive an Offenhauser special.

82,000 May View Grid Classic Tonight

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 29.—The first big battle of the 1939 football wars will be fought tomorrow night with the best collegians of last year meeting the national professional champions, the New York Giants.

The game, the sixth of the series, will be played in flood-lighted Soldier Field, before an expected crowd of 82,000, a record attendance for the event.

The 70 college stars, selected by popular vote from the ranks of last year's seniors, possibly make up the greatest group in the history of the series. They come from the East, the South, the Midwest, from the plains of Texas, from Minnesota, from all sections of the Pacific Coast.

It seems likely the setting will favor the All-Stars, based on the showing of the collegians a year ago, when they ran off with a 28 to 16 victory in a spectacular contest with the Washington Redskins, then champions of professional football.

The All-Star coaches believe their collegians will enter the game with spirit fired by the huge crowd, the dramatic setting, and a desire to achieve another triumph over their professional brethren. As the series now stands, the All-Stars have won two and the professionals one, with two of the contests resulting in ties.

The All-Stars were drilled for three weeks by Elmer Layden, Notre Dame head coach, and his assistants, Harry Stuhldreher, of Wisconsin; Carl Snavely, of Cornell; Slip Madigan, of St. Mary's, and Maj. Robert Neyland, of Tennessee. They were also assisted by Lynn Waldorf, of Northwestern, and Joe Boland, Notre Dame line coach.

The eleven collegiate starters were named by the fans of the Nation, but the coaches are under no obligation to keep them in the game after the opening kickoff. Thus, wholesale substitutions may be in order immediately following the first play.

N. Y. Suspends Mead, Armstrong's Manager, for 13 Months

Weill, Ambers Pilot, Also Suspended

Joe Jacobs, Galento's Manager, Refused License by Ring Heads At Hilarious Meeting

By the United Press.

New York, Aug. 29.—The New York Boxing Commission delivered three quick kayoes today to Eddie Mead, Al Weill and Joe Jacobs in the most drastic action ever taken by that body.

Mead, manager of Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong, was suspended for 13 months, as manager and second, because he insulted Referee Arthur Donovan during last week's Ambers-Armstrong lightweight title tilt. Donovan took five rounds from Armstrong on fouls.

Mead received this longest suspension ever handed out by the commission immediately after he had preferred charges of prejudice, threats and incompetence against Donovan at today's open commission meeting.

Weill Suspended 4 Months

Weill, pilot of Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, was suspended as manager and second for four months for arguing with Donovan in the same fight and for coaching Ambers from the corner.

Joe Jacobs, manager of Heavyweight Contender Tony Galento, was refused a manager's license and had his second's license revoked because he told the press July 11 that Champion Joe Louis had a "gimmick" (steel knob) in his glove when he knocked out Max Schmeling. Jacobs admitted shortly afterward that the charge was untrue and he had given out the story merely for publicity purposes.

The commission tempered its penalties with a bit of mercy. Suspensions against Mead and Weill will be lifted for the 30 days preceding November 1, when Armstrong is slated to defend his welter crown against Ambers at Madison Square Garden. And the revocation of Jacobs' second's license will not go into effect until September 1, the day after Galento and Lou Nova are slated to fight in Philadelphia.

Mead's Charges Rejected

Mead's charges against Referee Donovan were rejected by Chairman John J. Phelan on grounds that big Eddie had no witnesses or evidence to substantiate them. Mead's request that the decision, giving Ambers the lightweight title, be reversed in favor of Armstrong, was turned down on like grounds.

Mead requested that Donovan's license be taken away because (1) he favored Ambers in last week's fight, (2) he did not permit Armstrong to punch at Ambers when he had Ambers against the ropes and in corners, when both of Ambers' hands were free, and (3) in his instructions, just before the first round, Donovan looked straight at Armstrong and virtually threatened him by saying, "If there is any low punching in here, the round will be taken away from you."

In addition, Mead asked the commission to have Frankie Fullam, one of the title fight judges, explain why he had given Ambers the fourteenth round in which Ambers was on the verge of being knocked out. Chairman Phelan said that if such explanation were necessary, Fullam could make it to the commission in private.

Mead Does Some Explaining

Meanwhile Mead had to do some explaining himself. He admitted saying that Commissioner Bill Brown had indicated three weeks before the fight that six rounds would be taken from Armstrong on fouls. But he said he was considerably upset over Armstrong's loss when he made the statement and that he had no proof of its truth.

Weill testified that he had gone to Chairman Phelan twice on the day of the fight and requested that "any other referee except Donovan be named to officiate at the bout."

"Chairman Phelan told me to mind my own business," Weill said. "He'd name anybody he thought best qualified."

D. C. Officials To Be Guests at Dempsey Dinner

Melvin C. Hazen and Col. David McCoach, jr., District Commissioners, will be special guests at the National Boxing Association's "Ringside Night" dinner honoring Jack Dempsey, September 12, at the Willard Hotel.

Visiting delegates to the N. B. A.'s twentieth convention, opening September 11, will be welcomed to the District by Commissioner Hazen. He also will speak in behalf of the District in honoring Dempsey.

Applications for seats at the Dempsey dinner may be made to Boxing Commissioner Claude W. Owen, chairman of the N. B. A. convention committee, at the commission's office, 464 Indiana avenue northwest.

Girl Softball Rivalry Hits Peak Today

Scholl's Cafe Plays Girls All-Stars at Turkey Thicket Field

Washington's closest approach to the tennis feud between glamour girls Kay Stammers and Alice Marble, a budding softball rivalry between two pretty blond youngsters will be resumed at 5:30 p. m. today at Turkey Thicket Field, Tenth street and Michigan avenue northeast.

The occasion is the second game between Sholl's Cafe, champion of the Washington-Virginia Girls Softball League, and Moore's All-Stars, a squad picked from the remaining teams of the league by Davis "Pop" Volper, coach of the runner-up Turkey Thicket ten.

The principals are tall, willowy Dottie Keady, 18-year-old Western High graduate representing Sholl's, and petite Sally Saunders, 17-year-old Tech High student, who wields her potent right arm for the All-Stars.

To date Miss Keady holds a slight edge in their rivalry, two victories to one, but so close was their last pitching duel that there are many who believe Miss Saunders can even the score tomorrow. Last week, playing a preliminary to the True Blu-White's All-Star game at Griffith Stadium, Miss Keady and Sholl's nosed out Miss Saunders & Co., 4-3, with each pitcher allowing only two hits.

In a game early this season Sholl's blanked Miss Saunders and Turkey Thicket, 11-0, but accounts were later squared when that combination stopped Miss Keady and the cafeteria girls by the decisive score of 10-5.

Nova's 'Cold' Sets Back Date Of Galento Fight

Philadelphia, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The Lou Nova-Tony Galento heavyweight fight, scheduled for Municipal Stadium September 7, today was postponed a week to September 15 after Nova notified the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission he would be unable to get into shape.

Promoter Herman Taylor announced that Nova, in training at Atlantic City, was suffering a slight cold and informed Chairman Leon Rains of his disability. A commission physician examined the California fighter and the postponement was granted.

"Two-Ton" Tony and Nova will battle for an opportunity to meet Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis for the title next year.

Red Sox Recall 12 Players

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP).—General Manager Eddie Collins of the Boston Red Sox, announced today the recall of 12 players now out on option. They are Paul Campbell, first base; Fabian Gaffke, Chet Morgan, and Stanley Spence, outfielders; and Woody Rich, Ted Olson and Monte Weaver, pitchers, all with Louisville; Tommy Irwin, infielder and Jim Bagby, jr., pitcher, with Little Rock; Frank Dasso and Bill Sayles, pitchers, with Scranton, and Alec Petruskin, an outfielder, with Rocky Mount.

Phils' President 'Rests Comfortably'

Allentown, Pa., Aug. 29 (AP).—Gerald P. Nugent, president of the Philadelphia National League baseball club, was reported resting comfortably in Sacred Heart Hospital tonight after undergoing an operation for hernia.

The operation was performed by Dr. W. Wayne Babcock, of Philadelphia, assisted by Dr. H. Cotter Boyle. Nugent's brother-in-law and the Phillies team physician.

Weak Hitting Causes Nats Poor Showing

Lewis Only Star Of Club That Sinks Deeper Into Sixth

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—As the Nats reel through the West retreating deeper into sixth place, a naked truth all too apparent to Manager Bucky Harris is: his team can't hit.

Save for Buddy Lewis, who sometimes connects for extra bases, the Nats are a punch-less crew of slaphitters who require too many blows to produce a run. The pitching and the defense has alternately been blamed for the Nats' low estate this season, but at least equally guilty has been the club's attack.

Only once in the seven games on the current Western trip have the Nats scored more than four runs and on that occasion they were playing the last-place Browns. Their latest offense was a puny four-hit offensive against the Browns.

The only bat-swinger on the club with the physical power to break up a ball game with a long hit, except Lewis, is Bobby Estalella and Harris can not play him regularly. The little Cuban is still a sucker for a curve ball and has a habit of standing by idly when a good pitch comes across the plate.

The Nats are burdened with the type of ball players who would be valuable to a club boasting at least a pair of clean-up hitters, but they are doubtful assets to the Nats. George Case gets on base but too often is stranded there. Sammy West and Cecil Travis get their hits, but they break up no ball games. Jimmy Vernon is the weakest-hitting first baseman in modern Washington baseball history and Jimmy Bloodworth is not yet deemed a dangerous hitter. The most Harris can expect from his catchers in a hitting way is a slap single now and then.

The puny Washington hitting has been a burden, too, on the Nats' pitchers, poor as they might be. Rarely do they get any considerable margin to work with and consequently they are always working under pressure, which may account for their sudden blowups, as typified by the recent pitching of Joe Krakauskas.

The outfield and first base, positions which traditionally are supposed to provide the power hitting for a big league club, provide nothing of the sort for the Nats. Too well aware of that, Bucky Harris will design any trades the Nats may make toward acquiring some lads with muscle, even if he has to sacrifice defense skill.

Reds to Set Date

New York, Aug 29 (AP).—Today's postponed Cincinnati-New York National League game will be played later in Cincinnati, officials of the Giants announced today. The Reds will set the date during the Giants' next trip into the West. Today's game was the last scheduled for the two teams in the Polo Grounds this season.

HiBlaze, Allgaier Up, Wins Marlboro Feature in Romp

Winner's 2d Victory Of Meeting

Royal Veil, Long Shot, Wins Place Money; Happy Hostess Third; Double Pays $18.80

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 29.—Turning in his second victory of the meeting, T. Presgrave's HiBlaze toyed with his opposition in the Glenburnie Purse, outstanding event on today's program. Apprentice Jockey Harold Allgaier, leading rider at the meeting, performed in faultless style aboard the 4-year-old son of Blazes. HiBlaze scored with ease and had a four-length lead over Mrs. C. L. Payne's Royal Veil at the end of the sprint of 5½ furlongs. The latter, a long shot, turned back J. E. Simmons' Happy Hostess by a neck for second money. Five others competed.

HiBlaze's liking for the track was known to the majority of the crowd of 6,000, and the gelding was the favorite at a $5.60 mutuel while stepping the route in a creditable 1:08 4-5. Although a drizzle marked part of the program, the track was as fast as this track becomes.

Allgaier had HiBlaze off well. Happy Hostess challenged early, but the ultimate winner shook her off to draw out to a long lead and Allgaier did not have to put him to a stout drive. Royal Veil, paying $13.30 to place, slipped through on the inside to take the place money from the tiring Happy Hostess.

Daily doubling for the afternoon provided a pay-off of $18.80 for a large part of the crowd. Jockey Lou Machado kept Osofree winging out in front through the first race to bring a $7.50 mutuel to her backers. In the second race, Jockey Tony Vesselli put up a driving finish to get Did She home in front of the pack at a $6 mutuel.

Evergrand, owned by Eddie Talbert, of Washington, scored a surprise victory in the third race. A victim of Lula Khayyam's speed here last week, the son of Grand Time came back today to turn the tables of the speedy filly. In fact, Lula failed to save second money as Timber Storm closed with a rush. Evergrand saved ground all the way while both Lula Khayyam and Timber Storm were carried out at the first turn. Evergrand paid $18.80.

On Fishing

ACKERMAN.

We recently noted a letter from Philip Wylie, the well-known writer of fishing tales, as his contribution to a current gamest fish contest. In it he called the bonefish a glorified carp — facetiously, without any doubt, if his last story in the Saturday Post is to be considered. We predicted a storm of protest from his fellow members of the Rod and Reel Club, but had not the slightest idea that local anglers might take it up, too.

It is evident we don't know our bone-fishermen. They reacted and in no uncertain terms. One letter, from a well-known physician, who asked that his name be withheld because his fishing activities already had his patients in a dither, is too good to keep.

"Luck has been my colleague . . . but I still don't believe it about the Marine Torpedo. I have been fortunate enough to catch the majority of fighting fins, including maskerel in deep water on 3-6 and 6-9, but not one of them has ruined my hands, demolished my double bamboo, or caused the reel to smoke. My first bonefish weighed 3 pounds, my eighth of the same day weighed 8¾, my thumb still carries the scar, and the pole has perforce been removed from further fishing activity."

"From my experience of 20 years of hard fishing nothing under the sun in the way of fish possesses the speed of the wahoo, the power of the big Tortugas jack, the durability of the marlin, the color of a Rembrandt, and the unexpected antics of a sophisticated woman, as the strange, picturesque, bullet-shaped "Bomb-shell of the Banks"—a bonefish."

"I may be all wrong about this, and an 8-pound mackerel might tow an 8-pound bonefish backwards, but I believe the bonefish would have to be dead."

"Doc" says this after having caught two white marlin in one day on 6-9, which only proves that diversity of opinion is what makes fishing an universal sport. Yes, thanks—we'll continue to stand by the jumpers.

If the northerly and easterly weather can either be induced to blow, or shift without blowing, there is every right to think our piscatorial activities in the upper bay might get going again, this time with gamier antagonists than our summer-long standbys—the hardheads.

From Point Lookout to the Chester River the trout are feeding the banks and the bars. Only occasionally they are raising and striking surface lures as they did over a wide area on the Middles Sunday, but they are taking bait in real fashion during the early hours of the evening.

They are not large trout—as trout are, counted along the beaches—but fairly good going for the first of the run here. The average weight is probably less than 2 pounds, and the largest not over 3. The size should materially increase during the next week or ten days.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OSOFREE, $7.50, $4.60, $2.90; SECOND BID, $7.30, $3.90; FAIR HAIRED, $2.30.

OSOFREE, in motion at break, opened a good lead, saved ground and won with something in reserve. SECOND BID, off in fine fight, held on gamely under intermittent punishment in stretch. FAIR HAIRED was rushed to contention, moved up menacingly, but weakened right at end. SIZZLING ZERO went evenly. BLENETHEL was hard rushed on outside to gain forward position and weakened. JULIE WRACK had good early speed on outside and was pulled up when in distress.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:35. Off 2:39½. Winner, Mrs. V. P. Noyes' b. m. (9), by Macaw—Dinah Did. Trained by A. Young. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:28 1-5.

MISS BONES	(Cardoza)	103	4	6	7	8	8	8	55.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DID SHE, $6.00, $3.80, $2.40; BLUE PRELUDE, $4.30, $2.80; BY SURPRISE, $2.30.

DID SHE, forward factor from start, responded gamely when placed to drive and wore down BLUE PRELUDE to win going away. BLUE PRELUDE, first away, set good pace, but could not stay with winner while under vigorous handling in stretch. BY SURPRISE lacked early speed and hung in final drive after moving up. MISS CHICRO was hard ridden while closest to pace and weakened. WHITTLE PETE was allowed to lag in early stages. BLUEY had early speed.

Daily Double, Osofree and Did She, Paid $18.80.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:06½. Off 3:08. Winner, K. Talbert's ch. g. (5), by Grand Time—Lawn View. Trained by G. C. Brenton. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:09.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

COUNTER MARCH	(W. Kirk)	109	2	6	8	8	8	8	62.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EVERGRAND, $18.80, $7.50, $3.60; TIMBER STORM, $4.90, $2.70; LULA KHAYYAM, $2.60.

EVERGRAND, going in improved form, saved ground to get to front at first turn and withstood closing efforts of LULA KHAYYAM to win under drive. TIMBER STORM was carried wide at first turn and was held safe after recovering. FLAGETTA was blocked in final entering stretch, but for which she would have been closer. WAY OUT swung wide at turns and weakened. The others were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:39. Off 3:39½. Winner, T. Presgrave's br. g. (4), by Blaze—Hiaway. Trained by M. H. Everhart. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:08 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
HIBLAZE	(Allgaier)	112	3	4	1h	1½	1½½	1h	$1.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIBLAZE, $5.60, $4.20, $3.10; ROYAL VEIL, $13.30, $6.10; HAPPY HOSTESS, $4.20.

HIBLAZE assumed command early, shook off repeated challenges of HAPPY HOSTESS and drew out to win with speed in reserve. ROYAL VEIL, well placed from start, saved ground entering stretch and was best of others. HAPPY HOSTESS was used up forcing early pace and weakened. MARGIE WRACK was hard ridden and had no excuses. NIGHT PLAY could not keep up. The others were outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:10½. Off 4:14. Winner, L. Book's gr. f. (4), by Kiev—Doubtful Hours. Trained by J. Collins. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:26 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
DOHOEV	(Allgaier)	109	3	7	7h	5h	3h	1h	$2.45

MISS TORMENTED	(Oberti)	107	6	5	6	8	8	8	34.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOHOEV, $6.90, $4.60, $3.50; STAR TURN, $10.10, $6.50; JACKFULL, $5.90.

DOHOEV, allowed to settle into best stride, improved position gradually on outside, took command boldly and won without being put to pressure. STAR TURN was keen forward factor from beginning and held on gamely. JACKFULL lacked early speed and closed fast. SMALL DEVIL was hard used while setting pace and stopped when caught. TIMETTA had early speed. HAPPY HOST went wide at first turn and was taken up when in close quarters at far turn.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:39. Off 4:40½. Winner, Mrs. Johns' ch. g. (4), by Clock Tower—Revue. Trained by E. C. Allnutt. Value to winner, $275; second, 75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:57 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAST REVUE, $10.50, $6.50, $3.70; MARY'S BOY, $5.40, $4.40; MIRMISS, $3.30.

LAST REVUE, keen forward factor from start, wore down KEPI to take command and held on gamely under hard drive through stretch. MARY'S BOY, off last, worked way to contention on outside, moved up to leader, but bumped through final quarter. MIRMISS, within striking distance from start, closed gamely, but was held safe. KEPI began to weaken after a half. CHATTERDOO had early speed. AYLWARD stopped. ELLBEESEE failed to show speed at any stage.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:08. Off 5:07. Winner, M. C. Hazen's b. g. (4), by Longwood—Her Own. Trained by F. E. James. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 2:07 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WORTHOWNING, $11.90, $6.80, $4.20; BOSOPI, $5.30, $4.20; GRACKY, $5.40.

WORTHOWNING, off well and steadied along on inside, withstood repeated challenges of BOSOPI and held away through stretch while under vigorous handling. BOSOPI raced on outside of winner from start, was hard handled, but was unable to gain in final eighth. GRACKY, well placed from start, was held safe in final test. PENCADER, within striking distance from start, failed to rally when placed to drive. LUCKY TURN performed in dull fashion. JUSTA PILGRIM had early speed.

Ramases Wins Feature Event At Saratoga

Four Eligibles for Saturday's Hopeful Included in Field

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Hal Price Headley's Rameses, making his first start in a stake race, led all the way in the thirty-seventh Albany Handicap of 6 furlongs here this afternoon. Eight juveniles, including four lesser light eligibles for Saturday's Hopeful, matched strides for the $5,250 prize awaiting the victor. Rameses, an 8-to-1 shot, registered by a length in 1:12 1-5. It was his second victory in four outings.

Walter Schuttler's slow-starting Strawberry, recently fourth in the Sanford Stakes, was up in time to snatch the place award from Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Jacomar and C. V. Whitney's Parasang, this trio winding up in a camera battle. Then, in order and well beaten, came Son of War, Merry Knight, Corydon and Rumba Gus. Parasang was favorite at 16 to 5. Corydon, a close second choice which came from far back to earn third money in the Sanford, ran an unaccountably bad race, breaking last and beating one horse.

Parasang was the fifth straight beaten favorite. The best any choice had been able to do up to and including the Albany, was one third, that being when Pompeys Folly, a split favorite in the first race, managed to earn that portion of the purse.

Those in the Albany field named for the Hopeful were Ramases, Strawberry, the disappointing Corydon and Merry Knight.

Bank Publicity Men to Meet At Toronto

Selling, Training And Public Relations Will Be Discussed

By Thomas M. Cahill.

An unique sort of convention will be presented to delegates to the Financial Advertisers Association at its twenty-fourth annual meeting in Toronto, Canada, September 11-14, according to local bankers who will leave here September 9, joining the Baltimore delegation. Although the association is made up of public relations representatives of financial institutions in the United States and Canada, this is the first time it will hold its meeting on Canadian soil, and many unusual features are promised by the Canadian hosts.

Plans for the convention were arranged at a meeting of the organization's executive committee in Chapel Hill, N. C., July 8 and 9. Morning sessions will feature dramatizations emphasizing public relation problems in the career of an hypothetical financial institution, from its day of opening to the celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary. Such problems as advertising, selling, publicity, public relations, employe and officer training and the bank's place in the community will be discussed in dramatic form, with members from the Chicago, Cleveland and New Jersey chapters providing the cast of characters.

Authorities to Speak

Speakers of note who are authorities on the various topics discussed will participate in the dramatizations at appropriate points in the action. These dramatizations each morning will be preceded by an hour's "school of selling," conducted by an eminent counselor who will adapt the psychology of sales to the selling problems of financial institutions.

An exhibit of outstanding financial advertising, always a feature of the convention, will be on display. Special booths have been provided for exhibition of equipment and systems of interest to public relations men and women. Afternoons will be devoted to forum sessions conducted by trust, savings, investment and commercial departmentals, and attention will be given to the various media and sales problems in financial advertising and public relations.

The entertainment schedule will be typically Canadian and an interesting program is being provided for women delegates. Stephen H. Fifield, vice president of the association and assistant vice president of the Barnett National Bank of Jacksonville, Fla., is program chairman, while G. Lorne Spry, advertising manager of the Canada Trust Co., London, Ontario, is general chairman of the convention. George Everett, assistant vice president of the First Citizens Bank & Trust Co., Utica, N. Y., is president of the association.

American Trade Convention

Numerous Washington representatives of trade and industry groups will attend the twentieth annual convention of the American Trade Association Executives September 20-23 at Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y. The District of Columbia delegation, numbering upwards of 50, will be headed by Herman Fakler, vice president of the Millers' National Federation, who as president and chairman of the board of directors of the national group, will open the proceedings. Prominent on the convention program and in committee work of the American Trade Association Executives are the following local men:

Vincent P. Ahearn, executive secretary, National Sand and Gravel Association, who will speak on "Effect of the Federal Wage and Hour Law on Employer-Employe Relationships." Charles J. Brand, executive secretary, National Fertilizer Association, speaking on "Stimulating of Research Activities of Trade Associations." Julian D. Conover, secretary, American Mining Congress and member of convention exhibit committee. Emmet Dougherty, public relations director, Millers' National Federation and chairman, convention publicity committee.

Reuel W. Elton, secretary, National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association, member A. T. A. E. committee on co-operation with the Department of Commerce. A. M. Ferry, secretary, Wire Cloth Manufacturers Association, member of A. T. A. E. board of directors. Charles P. Garvin, general manager, National Stationers Association and chairman, A. T. A. E. committee on co-operation with the Department of Commerce.

Other Delegates

Also Bond P. Geddes, executive vice president, Radio Manufacturers Association and member of A. T. A. E. board of directors; Robert C. Hibben, executive secretary, International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers and member of committee on A. T. A. E. national institute.

Pyke Johnson, general manager, Automobile Manufacturers Association, former president of A. T. A. E., and now a member of the advisory board. Hector Lazo, executive vice president, Cooperative Food Distributors of America, member of A. T. A. E. committee on cooperation with the Department of Commerce. George A. Lilly, manager, American Dental Trade Association, member of committee on convention exhibits. Edgar Markham, assistant director, National Highway Users Association, member of A. T. A. E. committee on cooperation with the Department of Commerce. Miss Sylvia L. Pacelle, executive secretary, American Trade Association Executives. Gerald A. Walsh, manager, Graphic Arts Association of Washington, member of A. T. A. E. membership committee. Harold R. Young, Washington secretary, National Retail Drygoods Association, member of A. T. A. E. board of directors.

Messrs. Fakler, Johnson and Lilly are among the officers who will preside at the convention sessions, during which antitrust laws, labor and wage-hour legislation, consumer relationships, co-operation between governmental agencies and educational institutions with trade groups, and public relations in its many phases will be discussed. The convention will close September 23, with a golf tournament, at which George W. Romney, Washington representative of the Aluminum Wares Association, will defend his title to the A. T. A. E. silver trophy which he has held since last year.

Herman Fakler

Vice president of the Millers' National Federation, who will head a local delegation of 50 to the annual convention of the American Trade Association executives to be held September 20 to 23 at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N.Y.

Sterling Turns Upward With Fund Support

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—The British pound's dollar exchange rate showed a net gain in today's trading for the first time since the Government withdrew market support last Friday to conserve gold stocks.

The exchange equalization fund suddenly reappeared to give limited support to sterling, and this was coupled with guarded optimism in the exchange market over the prospects for European peace.

After opening at $4.24, against the overnight level of $4.25½, the rate slowly widened, to close 10½ cents higher, at $4.36.

Improved sentiment also caused a marked narrowing of the premediums on one and three months' forward dollars.

One widely heard explanation of the slight assistance by the government fund for sterling was that the authorities did not wish to see the price of gold soar to what they felt was an artificial level.

Under the revised banking laws of last March the Bank of England has authority ot value its gold stocks at market prices.

land has authority to value its gold the sterling-dollar rate is immediately reflected in the sterling gold price remains at $35 an ounce, price.

Gold eased off slightly in the London bullion market today to 157 shillings an ounce (about $34.22 at today's rate), compared with 161 shillings (about $35.10) yesterday.

C. & P. Tel. to Spend $70,000 for Facilities

Expenditures of $70,000 for telephone plant and equipment were authorized yesterday by the directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., according to C. A. Robinson, general manager. For the year to date, nearly $5,500,000 has been appropriated for construction, installation and removal of telephone plant and facilities in the District of Columbia.

Thirty-five thousand dollars of the amount appropriated yesterday will be spent for about 2½ miles of underground cable and 1,900 feet of underground cable and 1,900 feet of underground conduit to provide facilities for growth in telephone service between the Lincoln central office and the section east of the Anacostia River, adjacent to Pennsylvania avenue.

U. S. Company Sells Gold Mines to Japan

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Shareholders of the Oriental Consolidated Mining Co., one of the oldest American-controlled mining enterprises in the Far East, approved today the sale of the company's properties to Japanese interests for $8,174,500. The purchaser is the Nihon Kogyo Kabushiki Kaisha, a Japanese corporation.

The Oriental company, incorporated in 1897 in West Virginia, operates ten gold mines in northern Korea.

Wheat Drops In Principal World Marts

Corn, Oats, Rye And Lard Also Close With Declines

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Although Europe's war scare persists, the last vestiges of its effect on domestic grain prices the past week were wiped away from the Board of Trade's blackboards today by a sharp price drop.

Early losses of as much as 2 cents a bushel here accompanying corresponding or even greater declines in other world markets resulted from selling as hope increased among traders that peace may be preserved. Prices rallied slightly from early lows but steadied and closed 1⅛-1⅜ cents lower than yesterday. Final prices of 66⅞ for September contracts and 67⅜-67¼ for December were about 5¾ cents below the levels reached last Thursday at the height of the war scare and ⅛ lower to ⅜ higher compared with the close a week ago.

Dealings Restricted

International as well as domestic trade was restricted due to fluctuations in exchange and uncertainties as to freight and insurance rates to say nothing of wheat values themselves. The Rotterdam futures market was closed due to Dutch mobilization. While various countries were offering wheat at Liverpool, few sales were completed but some afloat Canadian grain was sold.

There was continued good demand for what domestic wheat was offered at terminal markets, with premiums for actual grain maintained, but no substantial business either in wheat or flour could be confirmed.

Corn closed ¾-1 cent lower than yesterday, September, 43⅝; December, 43⅞-44; oats, ¼-½ down; rye, ⅞-1 down; lard, 10-15 lower.

New Telephones Triple Number a Year Ago

New York, Aug. 29.—New telephone installations so far this year are triple those made in the corresponding period of 1938, according to Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys. This high rate of gain will hardly continue, however, as comparisons will soon be with months of rising activity last year.

During the first seven months of the year, the Bell System added 382,000 new phones, three times as many as in the same months of 1938," stated the analysis. "The months of June and July made the best comparison, with increases reported this year as against losses in 1938.

Banks Loan Safeway Stores $14,000,000

New York, Aug. 29.—It was announced today that Safeway Stores had obtained a loan of $14,000,000 from a group of banks headed by the Chase National Bank, National City Bank and Bankers Trust Company, for the purpose of retiring the 10-year 4 per cent sinking fund debentures outstanding in the amount of $13,300,000.

These debentures, dated June 1, 1937, will be redeemed on September 29, at 103½ with accrued interest. The loan will mature serially to 1946, with interest running from 1½ per cent to 2⅞ per cent, according to maturity.

Stocks Move Forward in Light Trading Hitch in Hitler-Soviet Pact a Factor U. S. Government Bonds Recover

New York, Aug. 29.—It was discovered today that the Soviet hadn't said "positively" when it signed the nonaggression pact with Germany. That makes it all different and financial markets of all descriptions were busy taking back all they had done on Monday, when it seemed that war could not be avoided.

When Wall Street went home tonight there was growing confidence that peace is still a possibility. The business of adjusting for Monday's miscues, when it was thought the Russians really meant it, started with the opening gong. There was no need for delay for by that time the news was out of Moscow that there had been a hitch, and that the pact with Herr Hitler had not yet been signed by the supreme Soviet of the Soviet Union. Translated, that means Parliament. Everything in Russia, supreme or inferior, is under the control of Josef V. Stalin, just as everything in Germany is under the control of Adolf Hitler.

World Caught Napping

It might be said that the financial centers of the world were caught napping for when it was announced a week ago that the Soviet and Germany had entered into a trade pact, and later into a nonaggression pact, and the two documents were duly signed by representative leaders of the two governments, those on the floor of the stock exchange who were accustomed to entering into contracts through a nod of the head or the raising of a hand assumed naively that actual signatures meant an actual international politics.

In that field there are other niceties that must be taken into consideration. A good deal depends upon whether the other fellow can bomb your cities and spread poison gas over thousands of your population. Ideologies do not cut much of a figure, for we have seen that Hitler's brand based on a hatred of communism, and Stalin's, based on a hatred of fascism, can be brought magically together without warning.

Financiers Were Trustful

All this was not appreciated by the wicked financiers of the world, who were caught off base because they were foolish enough to think that heads of nations always mean what they say. Accustomed as they are to taking a man at his word, to living up to contracts, to sticking by bargains even when they know they have made mistakes, the foolish money changers assumed that Messrs. Hitler and Stalin really meant it. What can be done with such people?

Of course, the Russo-Nazi pact may weather the storm yet, but the news that it was encountering heavy going sent the financial markets of the world on a rush to correct their extreme bearishness of Monday.

Opening 1 to 3 Points Up

Stocks opened 1 to 3 points higher. Trading was light, for investors didn't fancy being played for suckers twice in the same day, but gains at the close were impressive. The composite average was up 0.83 point and many speculative leaders closed higher by 1 to 2 points. Wheat turned about, losing some of its war gains and closing off 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents a bushel. Cotton, which is always weak when there is a danger to shipments because of war or other circumstances, bounded back 9 to 13 points. No further upward revisions were made in war risk insurance rates. In the foreign exchange market there was a general recovery, with the volatile pound sterling up 10½ cents over the night before.

Gains in London and Paris

Gains here followed similar strength displayed in the London market before business started in New York. Securities and currencies gained in dollar terms as hopes spread that a way would be found for the German ruler to save his face by as graceful a retreat as possible. News dispatches did not quote him on what he thought about the delay of the Russians in signing his pact, or possibly the wires couldn't stand the language. Strength also was displayed in the Paris market.

On the big board in this city all groups of stocks improved. Loft was the most active and added 1½ points. Steel and Bethlehem were up 1⅝ and 1, respectively. Chrysler and General Motors gained ¾ and 1¾. United States Rubber added 1⅝, General Electric 1¼, and Kennecott 1⅜. Other representative advances included Telephone, 3¼; duPont, 2¾; United Aircraft, 2; Woolworth, 2; Goodyear, 1, and Sears Roebuck, 1½.

Bond Market Improves

Price improvement was general in the bond list today in somewhat more active dealings in the Treasury and domestic corporate issues. Interest in foreign obligations was smaller than on Monday but prices were firm.

Government bonds on the stock exchange and in the outside market were uniformly above the preceding day. Second grade rails and the better of the carrier liens gave the best account of themselves, although the averages for utilities and industrials also showed some improvement.

Contributing to the advance in rails was the strength in the Baltimore & Ohio group, showing gains up to 1½ points and in some of the Lehigh Valley issues. Great Northern recorded gains up to 2½ points. Other firm spots included Union Pacific and some New York Central loans.

Manhattan Railways were among the best of the local tractions. B. M. T. 4½s of '66 also were strong. Bethlehem convertible 3½s sold up more than a point.

In the foreign section bonds of Australia and Canada were among the most active and strongest with advances up to 4 points. A weak feature was a drop of 14 points in Poland 7s of '68 assented 4½s to a new low for the year at 25. Norwegian issues had gains up to 5 points.

Distribution Costs Called Top-Heavy

Take 59 Cents of the Buyer's Dollar, Says 20th Century Fund

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 29.—Twentieth Century Fund reported today that its committee of experts had found the American public paid too much for the distribution of retail products.

In a 400-page volume entitled "Does Distribution Cost Too Much?" the Fund, an endowed research foundation, asserted: "About 59 cents out of the consumer's dollar goes for the services of distribution and only 41 cents for the services of production."

Answering the title of the report, the Fund said: "Taking the field of distribution as a whole, the process undoubtedly costs too much. But how much too much is impossible to say.

"In other words, we can say with confidence that there is waste in distribution, but we cannot reduce it to a percentage figure—as a whole or in any of its parts. Nor can we say that distribution is more or less wasteful than production.

"We can, however, point out specifically many ways in which the costs of distribution can be reduced or its efficiency increased."

Pricing System

The report then makes a series of recommendations featuring "the establishment of a differentiated pricing system for retailed goods."

Said the report: "We urge careful study of the feasibility of adoption of a pricing system that would clearly differentiate separate prices for each article according to the amount of services involved in its sale—such as credit, delivery, return privileges, etc.

"This would mean in practice that a purchase paid for by cash, carried out of the store by the buyer and not returned would cost less than if any or all of these services were required.

"If service costs were separately charged, it would probably reduce their volume. Such a practice also would permit those consumers who wanted to do so to eschew these services and get the advantage of lower prices.

'We recognize the difficulties of establishing a differentiated pricing system, however. Experience shows that the difficulties are serious—if not insuperable—when one retail store attempts to adopt the policy without the co-operation of its competitors."

Peoples Liquidating To Distribute 1 Per Cent

The Peoples Liquidating Corporation will make a distribution of 1 per cent to all holders of its certificates of beneficial interest, payable September 6.

This is the ninth distribution made by the Peoples Liquidating Corporation, and will bring the amount paid to certificate holders to 27 per cent. This distribution of 1 per cent amounts to approximately $95,000.

Paris

The United States dollar closed at 40.00 francs (2.50 cents to the franc) in the foreign exchange market today and compared with 2.46 cents for the French unit in New York's overnight. Exchange on London, 175.22. In bourse trading principal rente issues were 3 per cent, 75.00 francs; 4½s "A" 83.05; 4½s 1937, 162.70.

Foreign Markets

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—Stock prices showed general improvement today when traders saw a glimmer of hope war might be avoided. British funds were quoted well above the minimum prices established a few days ago. Sharp advances appeared for selected industrial stocks. Dealings in transatlantic securities were still under restriction and no prices were available.

Paris—The bourse on the whole approved today the reported firm reply of Chamberlain to Hitler's demands and closing prices were the best for the day. Domestic bank and industrial shares were bid up. Rentes were remarkably buoyant, closing 105 to 430 centimes ahead.

Liverpool—Wheat futures tumbled 2 to 3¼ pence today. General liquidation followed Chamberlain's speech relating to negotiations with Berlin. Nervous fluctuations in the pound sterling imparted a shaky undertone to the cotton futures market. Closing prices were off 8 to 14 points.

Indiana S. O. to Buy S. O. of Nebraska

Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 29 (AP).—Stockholders of the Standard Oil Co. of Nebraska voted today to accept the offer of Standard Ool of Indiana to purchase the Nebraska company's stock for $17.50 a share.

W. H. Pierpont, Nebraska company president, said the vote on the basis of shares of stock was 81 per cent in favor of the sale and 2 per cent opposed. The deal should be closed in 30 days, he added. The proposal from the Indiana company was received more than a month ago, with a $800,000 deposit put up as a guarantee of good faith in performance of its offer.

Cotton Futures Rally With Gains Of 45 to 65 Cents

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Cotton futures recouped a large part of Monday's heavy losses today with gains of 9 to 13 points. Less pessimism over eventual outcome of axis and anti-axis negotiations was the main factor in the upswing, brokers said. This was reflected in active buying by trade and foreign interests.

Demand from Liverpool and Bombay was also the outcome of the substantial rally in the pound sterling. At the same time, Liverpool dropped shortly.. (Liverpool prices advanced when official support for the pound lapsed.)

A fair amount of hedging sales on the new crop moving to market appeared, bearing out recent predictions by cotton men this pressure would gradually increase in the near future.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures lost 7 to 11 points today when issuance of 38 tenders on September contracts influenced considerable liquidation and unsettled the rest of the list. The market also had to absorb hedging sales against purchases of crude oil. Weakness in lard and grains influenced sentiment.

Sales totaled 225 lots: September, 5.87 bid; October, 5.64 bid; December, 5.78; January, 5.83 bid; March, 5.96.

Crude oil sold in the Valley at 4½ cents. Southeast quoted 4½ bid, and Texas 4½ nominal.

Textile Trade Likely to Top 1938 by 20%

But Activity in Second Six Months May Fall Below Year Ago

New York, Aug. 29.—Although aggregate textile activity in the final half may be moderately under a year earlier, because of reductions in cotton and silk consumption, the increase in the first half is expected to raise the full year showing up to 20 per cent above that of 1938, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today.

The textile industry as a whole has been operating at relatively high levels for most of the past year. Accordingly, year-to-year operating comparisons during the remainder of 1939 will be made with a much higher base than was the case in the first six months, when textile activity ran far ahead of the extremely depressed record of early 1938. Further gains in activity will be more difficult to attain, and with certain divisions now restricting output, it would not be surprising if aggregate production for the second half failed to equal the relatively high level of a year earlier.

Print Curtailment

Mill activity in the cotton division will be held down by the 25 per cent curtailment in print cloth production scheduled by producers for the third quarter in an effort to cut down the heavy mill stocks which have been a primary factor in holding prices at unfavorable levels. Largely because of this curtailment, cotton mill fiber consumption in the final half is likely to be about 10 per cent under that of the first half and around 5 per cent lower than for the like 1938 period. For the full year, however, fiber consumption is expected to be some 10 to 15 per cent higher than in 1938.

U. S., Aussies Cup Squads Idle Because of Rain

Teams Forced Off Courts After Short Morning Workout

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., Aug. 29.—Rain threw a sprag into practice sessions of the United States and Australian Davis Cup teams today, limiting the two squads to brief morning workouts before they were forced off the courts.

Both Walter L. Pate, nonplaying captain of the American team, and Harry Hopman, Australian leader, were disappointed by the weather. The Australians' workout was their first since arriving late last night from Brookline, Mass., where they defeated Yugoslavia.

John Bromwich played against Hopman while Adrian Quist and Jack Crawford played together in the short practice. Mercer Beasley, Princeton tennis coach, helped Frankie Parker with his service during the American's practice.

an infield out and tallied on Enos Slaughter's second straight hit.

The Bees scored the deciding run in the fifth when Hassett beat out a bunt down the third-base line and went to second on Don Gutteridge's wild throw. Simmons' long fly to Moore advanced Buddy another peg, and after Cuccinello was intentionally passed, Hassett scored on West's grounder when Lynn Lary threw low to the plate.

The Cards filled the bases in the fourth with one out, but Weiland lined to Sisti, who doubled Owen off second.

Volunteer Grid Team Start Drill

An old sandlot football team with a brand new name will hold its first meeting of the season Monday when last year's Takoma Fire Volunteers, now dubbed the Takoma Northerns, drill on the club's new gridiron.

The Northerns, which were good enough to hold Warwick A. C. to a 2-0 victory last year under their old name, have been furnished a new training ground, goal posts and tackling and blocking dummies by their sponsor.

Eighteen of last year's rugged players will form the nucleus around which a stronger and tougher club will be built. New players should call the manager at Shepherd 1520-J.

The District's Best and the Leader in Baltimore

Greiner broke Johnny Fischer's previous mark of 66, set here in the National Amateur in 1932, when the former champion won medalist honors. Par for the championship layout is 70.

Baltimore Monopoly

Baltimore monopolized the qualifiers. Trailing Brownell by two strokes was the remarkably consistent Spencer Overton, of Rolling road, with 76-74—150. Overton had three 38's and a 36 for his efforts, in qualifying for the fourth time. Next, two more shots back, was Ernie Caldwell, three-time Invitation champion of this club, who scrambled all day long for a pair of 76's and a 152 total. Caldwell played the first nine in 35-36 but was 11 over par for the back nine, for the two rounds, in his fifth successful attempt.

Virginia was saved a shutout by the 19-year-old State champion, Wynsol Spencer, of Newport News, who played spotty golf in recording a pair of 77's, but won his berth in a one-hole playoff by dropping a 20-foot birdie putt on the first hole. H. A. Wagner, jr., Green Spring Valley, was eliminated after making a fine comeback in the afternoon with a 71, and adding it to a morning 83 for a 154 total. He parred the extra hole.

High Wind Hinders

The scores were several strokes over the expected figures, due to a high wind in the morning that made it a real test of golf, plus perfect but slippery greens that took a toll on the putting surfaces.

Biggest disappointment of the day was the afternoon ascension of Ralph Bogart, the 19-year-old Army and Navy Club champion, who led the field by three strokes with a 73 at the half-way mark but went ten strokes higher to 83 in the afternoon. He started his second round by topping his second shot on the first hole, and finished it by hitting his approach on the eighteenth in a trap, where it rested beside an apple, and in playing apple and all he finished with a six and missed by two strokes.

Over Par Seven Times

Another casualty was the thirty-sixth-hole finish of Morton McCarthy, a favorite from Newport News, who needed a par four to qualify, and a bogey five to gain the playoff. He hit his first tee shot out of bounds in the cornfield, his second under an apple tree, and wound up by missing a 5-footer for a six. Wagner, who lost in the playoff; W. C. Cunningham, Richmond amateur, and McCarthy are the alternates.

Brownell was dissatisfied with his morning 76, where he went over par seven times, mostly from chip shots that rested too far from the cup to drop the putts on the tricky greens. His lone birdie was via a 5-foot putt on the fourteenth.

It was a different story in the afternoon, however, as after starting with a bogey 5 he sent his caddy to his car for another putter, and then dropped two 25-foot birdie putts on the fourth and tenth holes. He went over on the sixteenth for the second time by 3-putting, and the short thirteenth, where he missed the green.

Greiner's record 66 included five birdies, a bogey on the fifth where he hooked his second shot, and 12 regulation pars. He dropped 20-footers for birdies on the ninth and eleventh holes, but his other putts were from reasonable lengths. It will be his second National Amateur, Brownell's third and Spencer's first.

Volney Burnett couldn't get going, and had a pair of 80's, while Page Hufty picked up after a 79, Earle Skinker did the same after starting 7-6-6 on the second nine, and Martin McCarthy had trouble on his second round, to account for other District hopes.

Brinkerhoff Wins District Net Match

Gains Semifinals With Easy Victory Over Tarleton

Top-Seeded Harry Brinkerhoff, of Phillips playground, marched through the quarter-final round in the division of the District Recreation Department's city-wide tennis tourney yesterday with an easy victory over Jerome Tarleton, of Garfield, 6—0, 6—2, at Takoma Recreation Center.

Art MacNeil, of Takoma, favorite in the junior division, had little trouble in the first set but met stiff competition in the second when he defeated Bob Loschack, of Happy Hollow, 6—1, 7—5.

Semifinals begin Friday at Palisades at 10 a. m. for juniors and at 2 p. m. for seniors. Results in yesterday's play:

Juniors
M. Tarleton, of Garfield, defeated Bill Mosick, of Edgewood, 6—4, 6—3; 6—4; D. Smith, of Montrose, defeated J. Pfeiffer, of Virginia avenue, 6—1, 6—1; Allen Adler, of Raymond, defeated Clyde Bradley, of Taft-Burroughs, 6—0, 6—0.
Seniors

McCormick, Yates Pace Qualifying

138 Scores Best Among 821 Amateurs On 28 Golf Courses

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 29.—Charley Yates, happy-go-lucky Atlantan who won the British Amateur title a year ago, and Bruce McCormick, Pasadena, Calif., fireman who was National Public Links champion in 1937, established themselves today as prime favorites to win the Forty-third National Amateur golf championship.

They shot the best scores in a field of 82 crack golfers who competed in 28 locations throughout the United States in sectional qualifying rounds of the big tournament at Chicago, September 11-16. Playing almost as far apart as possible, they came up with 36-hole totals of 138.

Yates, firing on the famous East Lake Course at Atlanta, shot a 1-under par 70 in the morning and followed it with a 68. McCormick, at Hollywood's Lakeside Club, fired a 66, 4 under par, and followed it with a 72.

Although they'll have to compete with seven former champions, including defending Titleholder Willie Turnesa, of New York, when the main events starts over the North Shore course, these two really stamped themselves as players to beat today.

Nearest to them with 140s were Art Doering, who led the biggest district of them all, Chicago; Maurice McCarthy, of Cincinnati, and Robert E. Clark, of Denver. Doering put together rounds of 69, 71 at Olympic Fields to top the 23 qualifiers who emerged from an original list of 136. McCarthy and Clark matched rounds of 71, 69.

The generally high scoring came as the day's biggest surprise. Par took a good many lickings on single rounds, including about a dozen in the 60s on various courses, but in most places a pair of 75s was good enough.

As usual in this kind of competition, where about only one in five starters can qualify, several prominent golfers failed to make the grade. They were few, however, in comparison with those who were successful.

Among those failing to get in were Tommy Tailer and Eddie Driggs, who failed by one stroke at New York; Bob Babbish, at Detroit; Crawford Rainwater, at Atlanta; Morton McCarthy, at Baltimore; Rodney Bliss and Billy Cordingly, at Omaha; Don Schumacher, at Dallas; Frank Dolp, at San Francisco, and Jack Westland, at Portland, Oreg.

All five of the 1938 Walker Cup players who had to play through the sectional tests—Yates, Marvin (Bud) Ward, Ray Billows, Reynolds Smith and Fred Haas, jr.—qualified handily.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"Psychic bids add a bit of spice to the game," says J. Edward Morrow, Dallas expert, in answer to a bridge fan's plea that they should be barred from the game.

A psychic take-out double backfired in a recent duplicate tournament and cost the psychic doubler and his partner 900 points. They were set five at a romantic bid of three diamonds, attempted by the psychic bidder's partner after two hectic rounds of doubling, redoubling and bidding the opponents' suit had addled his thoughts completely.

The hand and the bidding are shown in today's box. The defenders played as though they enjoyed it. South wisely chose to lead the club ten; small was played from dummy, and North put up the queen, which East won. In a hopeless contract East now freely tried to establish a heart ruff, leading a low heart. South played the heart eight; North overtook with the jack, cashed the club king and led a third round for South to trump. South then led a diamond and North took the ace and king, declarer's hopes of winning a heart ruff vanishing with them. Three heart tricks were cashed by the defenders, leaving the lead in North's hand.

He played a trump; East won and came close to losing two more tricks, for a set of seven, nearly leading the spade eight before cashing his last diamond. He thought better of the spade play, realizing that Notrh might trump, throw him back in with a trump and he would have a losing spade in his hand. By cashing the last diamond and then leading spades North could ruff, but then had to lead a club to dummy's nine.

East was set five tricks, losing a club, a club ruff, four hearts and three diamonds.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

George McNulty, general counsel of the wage-hour division, Labor Department, will address the weekly luncheon of the Federal Bar Association at 12:30 p. m. today at the Army and Navy Club . . . The bulk of Washingtonians attending District Day at the New York World's Fair will probably be Federal employes—if most of them haven't already gone there on one or another of the excursions sponsored by the employe organizations. The prices have come down on some of the sponsored tours . . . The first fall meeting of the Agriculture Players will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in the department auditorium. Plans for the coming productions will be discussed. All persons in the department interested in dramatics are requested to attend . . . Also, the Agriculture Symphonic Choir began rehearsals yesterday, these to be followed by weekly rehearsals. This fine organization is now two years old and plans an appearance early in the fall. Its ranks are open to talented employes . . . Jobs: The C. S. C. announces an open competitive examination for the position of junior public health nurse at $1,800, the job assigned under the Indian Field Service, Interior Department. September 11 is the closing date on applications. High school education and certain nursing training are required for entrance to the examination. A written test covering practical questions will be given applicants. Forty—the top age limit—will not be waived in any case. Chief dietitian, $2,300; head dietitian, $2,000; staff dietitian, $1,800; in Veterans' Administration, Public Health Service and other Government departments . . . The local National Federation of Federal Employes delegates—including Ulrey J. Biller, Washington's leading authority on retirement problems—left here yesterday afternoon aboard two special trains for San Francisco for the biennial convention. They were joined here by a group of delegates from Baltimore and Philadelphia, among them being John Fitzgerald, of New York, a vice president. Henry Nolda, of the Veterans Administration here, headed the local party, in the absence of President Luther C. Steward and Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer, who went to San Francisco ahead of the convention opening, September 4 . . . The Agriculture Department Graduate School, one of the highest-ranking institutions hereabouts, will add some 20 new courses this year. Its catalogue for 1939-40 is now available and may be obtained by calling at the office, room 1031, South Building . . . Among the resolutions awaiting action by the A. F. G. E. national convention in Atlantic City next month are several proposals for constitutional amendments, four of them asking election of a custodial employe as national vice president. Lodge 195, Chicago, resolved that at least one custodial employe be elected national vice president "in order to promote harmony and strength within this organization," while Lodge 401, Hartford, Conn., urged that there be one national vice president to work on custodial legislation exclusively, to keep lodges informed more directly on custodial affairs . . . Representatives from lodge bowling teams participating last year in the A. F. G. E. Bowling League and all new teams interested have been asked to attend a meeting to be held Wednesday, September 6, at 5:15 p. m. at the Lucky Strike Bowling Alleys. This league may have teams composed of men, teams of women or teams comprising both men and women.

The removal of approximately 125 employes of the United States Housing Authority to rented quarters at 1012 Fifth street northwest, yesterday helped slightly to relieve the crowded condiitons in the vast Interior Building. This unit is known as Regional Office No. 5, handling affairs for USHA in 15 Western States. This agency previously had expanded out of the Interior Building.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter XVIII

FOR THE first and last time I ever saw her do it, Adriana jibed the yawl unintentionally as we came around to an anchorage. It was a thorough-going jibe, the booms banging over a good 90 degrees from broad on the starboard to a similar position across the port rail. The wind was strong, too, outside the jetties. There was considerable noise and shock, and it was impossible to guess how much the rigging had been strained. I said nothing, being in no position to throw stones, and having my head fully occupied with thought and my hands with getting the lashings off the anchor and dinghy.

When the yawl was swinging at her chain with flapping canvas, I slid the small boat overboard and started for the land. Adriana disappeared below, to be ill, I'm afraid.

I rower fifty yards or so to the sickle of sand that lay in the angle made by the coastline and the eastern jetty, got out on it and dragged the light cedar dinghy well up on shore. At this point a shattered concrete seawall joined with the short thick breakwater to screen the basin. I climbed it, and stood in the wind on top of the jumble of granite.

Without thought, I looked across the creek toward the point on the far jetty where I had first spotted the body. The scene that I saw then was for some reason impressed on my mind even more sharply than the picture of the original discovery.

At my feet lay the channel, boiling with the ebb. Beyond, the dark weed-draped jetty ran out into the sea. Beyond still, the mournful curve of beach stretched away to the dull-colored heights of Gay Head.

And on a flat block of the jetty, partly outlined against the far collar of the surf, partly against the buff sand and the slate green waters of the bight, stood two men.

I doubt if they were 150 feet away from me, and every detail of their appearance was clearly visible. One was Mr. Raskin, looking at me steadily and angrily, his hands on his hips and his trouser-legs flapping against the thick calves of his widely-braced legs.

The other was a hulking thick-set man, with an embittered face the color of a grimy penny, and long straight hair shining blue-black in the sunlight. At that distance his eyes showed only as two dark blank triangles under craggy brows, the upper corners turned inward to raise the center of the forhead into chronic furrows of suffering or bad eyesight. His cheekbones were high and set wide across a broad flat nose. His mouth was hard and heavy, and expressed violence even more explicitly than the spoiled soft mouth of Mr. Raskin.

Before the meaning of their posotion had struck me I called out:

"Did you see that body?"

Mr. Raskin stuck his hands in his trousers' pockets and answered me quietly, the wind bringing every word.

"There was no body."

"What!" I cried, stupidly enough, as I now think.

"There was no body," repeated Mr. Raskin, in a voice as cold as the waters swirling between us.

Then, finally, I understood, and looked more carefully at their feet.

He was quite right. There was no body.

AT THAT moment a rather absurd explanation came to me why Adriana considered the president of the Sea Reduction Corporation dangerous. Mr. Raskin was no gentleman.

But, in a general way, this was also why I felt him to be dangerous. He was a smart and passionate person, devoted solely to his own interest. He had been brought up in no other code. As a result, he could take any strong line suggetsed to him by the whim of the momoent without being hampered by the system of checks and balances imposed on a man's character by a civilized upbringing. Further, it made it impossible for me to predict how he would jump when a situation pinched him, as he was evidently being pinched now.

He said two more words:

"Got it!"

Then he stod there motionless, with his hands in his pockets and his hulking boy friend at his side—and I was so unsure of what was in his mind I even fancied he might pull one hand out of his trousers and take a crack at me if I started to alarm the village. We were just within easy pistol shot of each other. Only, I didn't have a gun. Maybe he didn't have either, but I wasn't anxious to fiud out definitely.

I thought: if they have had time to weight the body before casting it loose (which I doubt), it will not go far beyond the jetties. We can get it by dragging later as easily as now. If (which seems much more likely) they had only time to free it and let it run with the tide, the chances are that in two or three hours when the tide turns, it will be washed up somewhere along the shore anyway.

It seemed to me the better part of valor would be a show of accepting his fiction that there was no body, stand off shore in the Adriana, as we started to do, and then come back after a short while, either to Menemsha or to some other anchorage on the island, and notify the authorities by 'phone.

So I looked Mr. Raskin in the eye and grinned and gave him, silently, the "Hi Toots" salute, and turned on my heel and climbed back down the breakwater to the beach. Just as my head dropped below the level of the topmost granite blocks I glanced back. The two men were still standing there with heads inclined towards each other, but they were evidently talking together and there seemed to me to be less of an air of confidence about Mr. Raskin.

"Come on, lady," I said to Adriana, as I pulled the dinghy up on the bow of the yawl, "we're going for our sailing lesson, just as planned."

The girl asked no questions until I had the anchor secured in its chocks, and came aft. She had put up the helm, the sails had filled, the Adriana was heeling over and the water starting to chuckle at the bow as we squared away northward from the shore.

"Let's cross the mouth of the creek," I suggested, "I want the world to notice that we are putting out to sea."

"All right," she said. "Trim in the sheets. We'll stay on this tack, close-hauled." I had begun to know the meaning of the simpler orders, and did as she directed. Adriana held the tiller with her hip and sheeted in the mizzen. I attended to the mainsail and jib. Gay Head swung around to rise and fall over the bow.

"WHAT'S UP?" asked Adriana. I told her about my encounter with Raskin & Co. She took it in silently. Then she nodded, and said:

"We can sail along the shore into the lee of Gay Head and hail the lookout at the lifesaving station, if you want to, warn them soon, without having to land."

"A good idea," I agreed. "What I can't understand is, why is our friend Mr. Raskin so steamed up about this matter? What is one Jap artsit more or less to him? Yet I can see it means enough to him so that he is willing actually to threaten me—because that's what he was doing—to keep my trap shut about it. This business just puts a lot more questions, instead of answering any."

"There must have been a terrible accident," she suggested. "Perhaps it happened over at the plant of the Sea Reduction Corporation——"

"And Mr. Raskin doesn't want it known? Why?"

"Oh, how should I know? Would it be because of a damage suit, or something?"

'Maybe. Or maybe it is that he's afraid there would have to be an investigation at the plant, of where the accident happened. If it was an accident——"

The girl turned her wide eyes on mine.

"You don't have any other idea, do you?"

"Anything is possible, with that man involved. I've come to agree with you entirely about him. But I must say, the—that is—the injury to the throat looked like an accident, all right. I can't imagine how it could have been inflicted by any weapon I know of. And it's silly to get melodramatic and imagine all sorts of things when there is no apparent reason why anybody should kill a strange Jap artist who happens to be painting at Menemsha."

We were cutting across the entrance to the creek and basin at a distnce of perhaps 300 yards from the nearer jetty. Behind the basin and village the houses and trees stood up bright in the sunlight on the highlands. Everything on that side of the creek seemed clean and sweet. But the other side, where the desolate dune lands rolled away from the high bank left by the dredges, seemed to me to be in shadow. Whether this was a literal shadow flung down by some small cloud, or whether it was cast by the darkness in my mind, I don't remember. Two men were walking slowly along the beach from the creek toward the crouching buildings in the inclosure of the Sea Reduction Corporation.

"By the way," I said, "who is the copper-colored friend of Mr. Raskin's I saw with him?"

"I don't konw," she said, "but I suppose it was the caretaker who lives at the plant."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Peace Offices In D. C. Quiet Despite Crisis

League of Nations Association Only One With Statement

As the issue of peace or war hung in the balance yesterday, peace societies in Washington revealed little activity.

A poll of six national peace organizations with offices here brought a statement from only one, the League of Nations Association. The association's program remains unchanged in face of the crisis, it was announced, except that in the event of war emphasis will be on steps to be taken in drawing up the eventual peace.

Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the Washington committee of the association, declared that "if war breaks out we shall be compelled to stand aside from the conflict until the possibilities of peace shall reappear . . . meanwhile we shall lay plans. If this thing does break out as a terrible catastrophe it must end in a permanent settlement."

The idea of the League of Nations, of collective security, international justice, and economic cooperation, is still alive and must form the basis of a new peace, Hildreth said. "We realize there has got to be revision of the Covenant of the League," he continued. "These things grow by evolution."

At other local peace offices, the American Peace Society, the National Council for Prevention of War, the American League of Peace and Democracy, there was either no answer or all officers were unavailable. The American Union for Concerted Peace Efforts said its director, Clark Eichelberger, was expected back in Washington in a few days, and the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace referred calls to its president, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, in New York, as the executive secretary and his assistant were in Canada.
